CO-OPERATION WILL BRING SOLUTION

H. A. Smith Urges Broad-minded People to Work Together on the Liquor Question.

HE FAVORS RESUBMISSION

Congregational Brotherhood to Try and Get to Bottom of Facts in Dispute.

Taking the stand that the present controversy over the liquor question is deplorable in every sense of the word, H. Alexander Smith, a well-known attorney, made a strong plea for co-operation on the part of honest-thinking men to work for the proper solution, in an address before the Brotherhood class of the First Congregational church yesterday morning. Mr. Smith holds that the issue in the light presents two questions, namely: What is the evil in liquor traffic? and what is the best way to reach the evil? His talk was in favor of a resubmission of the liquor question to the people of the city.

There was a good attendance at the church to hear the address, and before adjourning a resolution was adopted which will result in several committees being appointed, along the lines suggested by the speaker. The Brotherhood class is making an effort to get to the very bottom of this question, and arrangements are being made for several more addresses on the subject by prominent men, to be given each Sunday morning during the next several weeks.

To Get to the Facts.

The resolution adopted yesterday calls for the selection of a committee of five members of the Brotherhood. The duty of this committee will be to make arrangements for the appointment of another committee of broad-minded men by other persons in the city. It is then proposed to have these committees meet in joint session for discussion of the question itself, eliminating personalities entirely, in order to get to the bottom-most facts in the case.

The reason for all of this is that the class members feel that the question of a resubmission has not been discussed or explained as fully as it might be. The committee from the Brotherhood will be named within a few days.

Mr. Smith's Address.

Mr. Smith's address was in the form of a discussion of the liquor question, and follows in full:

Mr. Smith's address follows.

When Professor Parsons asked me about 10 days ago to discuss this question from the standpoint that he knew I was in sympathy with, I hesitated for two main reasons: First because of the difficulty in coming to any conclusion as to the merits of the controversy and after coming to such conclusion to give reason therefor; and, second, because I felt that there were many others much better qualified to present the matter than I was. On deliberation, however, it seemed to me that one should be willing and able to give reasons for his views on such an important matter. Besides, I think I can rightly say that any discussions with Dr. J. H. Franklin have been of the most friendly nature, and that we each respect the convictions of the other. So that in any discussion that we may have, all personal feeling is eliminated, and I hope we can eliminate the heat that has been shown by some on both sides.

The first step in discussing a question of this kind is to determine the exact issue of the debate. This is particularly important now because so many irrelevant matters have been injected into the discussion. It appears to me that the matter can be simply stated: Is prohibition or regulation better for our community, considering all circumstances and conditions?

By thus stating the issue, we eliminate certain matters that have been brought into the question.

First—The question as to what particular individuals may be on either side of the controversy does not affect the issue. There are some who appear to believe that it is of the first impor-

MAJORITY OF 18,000 IS FOR RATIFICATION

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Jan. 22.—Almost complete returns from Saturday's election show the ratification of the constitution of the proposed state of New Mexico by a majority of approximately 18,000. The few remote precincts yet to be heard from will not change the result materially, though the majority will probably be increased.

The feature of the election was the almost complete disappearance of partisan lines. In Santa Fe county, almost evenly divided politically, the majority for the constitution was 2,200. In the solidly Democratic county of Chaves, the majority for the constitution was 1,750, while in the equally solid Republican county of Valencia the constitution carried by 1,020. Some 50,000 votes were cast, there being 34,000 for and 16,000 against. The constitution secured a majority in all save three of the 26 counties of New Mexico. The election passed off quietly, and no instances of violence or fraud have been reported.

DEATH RATE IN MINES IS HIGH

COAL MINERS' RISKS GREAT IN COLORADO.

Report Says Foreign-Born Workmen Often Cause Disasters—Methods Crude.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Through the misunderstanding of orders or by reckless disregard of the necessary rules of operation, foreign-born workmen, without actual experience in mining, often imperil the lives of trained and experienced workers, according to a bulletin made public today by the bureau fo labor. The figures cited are principally for the decade ending 1908, in which the fatal accidents in the coal mines, at the rate per 1,000 employes, were 3.11. For the decade ending 1906, the latest for which figures for other coal mining countries were available, the average fatality rate in North America, says the report, was 3.13 per 1,000. This, it is said, was higher than the rate in other important coal fields in the world.

Figures for a few countries for the same period, are:

United Kingdom, 1.29 per 1,000; Austria, 1.35; France, 1.81, and Prussia, 2.13.

The full extent of the risk in coal mining in North America," the report continues, "is, however, not clearly shown by these figures for the coal fields as a whole, but consideration must be given to the rates for each geographical section. These show that in the east-central section, which comprises western Kentucky, Illinois and Indiana, the fatality rate for the 20 years ending with 1908 was only 2.25 per 1,000 employes, while in the western section—Colorado, New Mexico and Utah—it was 6.4 per 1,000, and in the Pacific coast section—Washington and British Columbia—7 per 1,000. It would appear that the variation in the fatality rate is due to different mining methods and to differences in the coal seams."

Experience Counts.

An important relation to the number of fatalities is the length of mine experience and the bulletin cites that of the 1,669 persons killed in West Virginia in the 10-year period ending with 1908, one-fifth had worked less than one year in the mine and over 60 per cent had been at work less than five years.

"Mining methods in the United States," says the report in concluding, "are often crude and known safety precautions are either disregarded or not used. Child labor laws have been, and still are, indifferently complied with in many states, and fatalities occur each year among children at an age when they should be in school. In 1908 10 children of 12 to 14, and 13 of 15 years, were among those whose deaths in the mines were recorded in the official reports."

SHOOTING AT PAPETON REPORTED; OFFICERS ARE RUSHED TO SCENE

Two automobiles bearing Deputy Sheriffs Burno and Compton were rushed to Papeton at 12 o'clock last night in response to a telephone call from that place saying that a duel with pistols between two men had taken place. Up to time of going to press, this (Monday) morning, no details of the shooting could be learned, as the officers had not returned to the city.

From telephone inquiries, it is learned that two shots were heard about 11 o'clock, but whether anyone was hurt or killed, could not be ascertained. A man stationed a half mile from Papeton reported that there appeared to be considerable excitement there.

Papeton is situated several miles north of Colorado Springs, there being a number of men there who are employed in the coal mines.

BRITISH AND TURKS HAVE FIGHT IN INDIAN OCEAN

FRANKFORT, Germany, Jan. 22.—The Zeitung's Constantinople correspondent reports a serious collision between British sailors and Turks at Dubuya, in the Indian ocean. Several bluejackets were killed. The British, according to the dispatch, afterwards bombarded Dubuya.

$400 MIDNIGHT FIRE

Fire, caused it is believed from a defective flue, caused damage estimated at $400 to the four-room, unoccupied dwelling at 520 North Institute street at 12:20 o'clock this (Monday) morning. The flames had a good start by the time the hose wagons from stations Nos. 1 and 4 and the truck wagon from station No. 2 arrived, but there was a good water pressure, and the firemen soon had the flames under control. The roof of the dwelling was gutted, but the side walls were not damaged to any great extent.

According to the firemen, a family moved out of the building yesterday, and, after leaving, rubbish was burned in the stove. It is believed that it was due to this that the defective flue ignited.

The house is owned by John Pinckney.

Pietro Mascagni, the famous composer, seated at a piano playing the score of his new opera "Ysobel" for the musical critics of Rome. Mascagni's new opera is said to have created a sensation among lovers of music in Europe, and it was at the earnest request of his fellow musicians at Rome that the erratic composer agreed to play the score of his latest creation. Signor Mascagni not only played the score, but sang all the parts, and even imitated the orchestra, greatly to the delight of those who attended the recital.

ASKS SUPPORT OF THE CAUCUS

STATE CHAIRMAN SAYS IT IS A DUTY.

New York Senatorial Situation Enlivened by Open Letter. Dix Still Keeps Out.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 22.—Winfield A. Huppuch, chairman of the Democratic state committee, in a statement issued at Hudson Falls tonight, said every Democratic senator and assemblyman should abide by the result of the caucus which last Monday night cast a majority vote for William F. Sheehan as the party candidate for United States senator. He said in part:

"The caucus being the recognized usage of all parties from time immemorial, there should be no question of its being the duty of all assemblymen and state senators elected upon the Democratic ticket to abide by its result and vote for the senatorial candidate of the overwhelming majority. Most assuredly, should either of the other candidates voted for at the caucus have secured a majority of its votes their followers would undoubtedly have insisted upon such candidates' undivided support."

Mr. Huppuch added that he issued this statement after consulting a majority of the members of the committee he heads and that it expressed their views.

Senator Franklin Roosevelt, the young leader of the "insurgents," said:

"I do not believe that Mr. Huppuch's statement will have any effect on the 26 members of the legislature who have refused to support Mr. Sheehan. It certainly will have no effect so far as I am concerned."

ADVISORY BOARD URGES A CAUCUS

DENVER, Jan. 22.—The Democratic state advisory board met tonight, with I. N. Bunting of Grand Junction the only absentee, and after several hours' discussion took action favoring a caucus. A resolution was unanimously adopted requesting Senator W. H. Adams, president pro tem of the senate, and Representative Dorfee to call a caucus of Democratic members Monday night to select a candidate to succeed the late Senator Hughes. What action the legislators will take appears problematical.

Temperatures This Week Will Average Above the Normal

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The general pressure distribution over the North American continent and adjacent oceans is such as to indicate that temperatures this week will average above the normal in practically all districts, preceded, however, by moderately low temperature the first part of the week in the eastern and southern states.

A change to colder weather will overspread the northwestern states the latter part of the week. The principal disturbance will appear on the Pacific coast Tuesday or Wednesday, cross the middle west Thursday or Friday and the eastern states the last of the week; this disturbance will be preceded by rising temperatures and accompanied by general precipitation.

LEGATION QUARTER CLOSED ON ACCOUNT OF PLAGUE

LONDON, Jan. 22.—A special dispatch from Pekin says that, because of the plague, the diplomatic body has closed the legation quarter.

The Chinese occupants, it is expected, will close the European quarter tomorrow.

GET $600 FOR SEOUL Y.M.C.A.

IS TO AID LOCAL MAN'S WORK IN KOREA.

Phillip Gillett Doing a Great Work There, Say Speakers at Mass Meeting.

Partially illustrating the interest which the people of this city take in the services of Phillip Gillett, the secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Seoul, Korea, who is supported by Colorado Springs churches, over $60 was raised for the work at the mass meeting last night at the First Methodist Episcopal church. There are assurances that this sum will be raised to $1,000 within the next few days. The meeting was well attended and was largely devoted to the work of Gillett in Korea.

John Z. Moore, a returned missionary from Korea told of the marvelous work that Gillett is accomplishing. In addition to the almost unbelievable number of conversions each month, Gillett is introducing into the lives of the native Koreans, manual training, athletics, and study of economic questions.

The Y. M. C. A. at Seoul was organized by Gillett, and the sucess is due to his own efforts. In three years he has secured a beautiful building, a gift of Wanamaker and other eastern capitalists, and has accomplished a work which the laymen's missionary movement points to with pride.

J. Campbell White made a short address telling of the value to this community of Gillett's work and told how the money which was given would be spent. James An, a native Korean, who is attending the High School here, told what his people need and how much it means to them to be aided by energetic foreigners.

Many Present in Afternoon.

The same enthusiasm and energy which made the laymen's missionary movement meetings of a year ago so successful was displayed at the mass meeting for men yesterday afternoon at the First Methodist church when J. Campbell White, the so-called "Father of the movement" and J. Earl Taylor, a prominent worker, addressed the meeting. The church was crowded and the attendance points to a successful campaign at the meetings Tuesday.

Mr. Taylor outlined the work of the movement and pointed out the great success in the evangelization of the world that the energy and methods of the organization has brought about. He told of the success in raising funds to support missionaries and how these missionaries are getting so much good out of the support which they reelve.

"Important By-products of the Present Awakening" was the theme of Mr. White's address and in it he brought out a number of points in which the missionary movement affects other lines of religious work. "Missions are great factors in shaping the community of any nation," he said. "They add something that cannot be forgotten and are a power that are reckoned not in money but in service."

"Men of wealth in America after giving large sums of money for the support of missions, are using their influence and ability to induce young men to take up mission work."

The meetings will continue tomorrow afternoon and evening, and a supper for men will be given at the First Methodist Episcopal church tomorrow at 6 o'clock. The program will be given as announced.

TAFT BACK IN CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—President Taft returned here early today from New York where he addressed the Pennsylvania society on Panama canal fortifications. He went alone today to All Souls' Unitarian church. There were few callers at the White House.

HORNET SEIZURE CREATES A STIR

DEPARTMENT OFFICIALS INVESTIGATING.

Vessel's Honduran Papers Believed to Be Invalid—Hostile Operations Continue.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The report that the Hornet, General Bonilla's revolutionary gunboat, which had been promoting his cause along the coast of Honduras, has been boarded by a force from the American gunboat Tacoma was confirmed in a wireless dispatch received by the navy department today from Commander Cooper of the United States ship Marietta.

The dispatch merely said it had been found necessary to place a force on board in order to detain the Hornet, and added that details would be reported later. The state department is anxiously awaiting information in order to determine its future course.

The attorney general is investigating whether the Hornet has violated the neutrality laws of the United States and pending the result the state department announced that the vessel would not be permitted any act of hostility against Honduras.

The action of Commander Davis of the Tacoma in boarding the Hornet, it is assumed here, was based upon an intention of the revolutionists to strike a telling blow. The naval officers in Honduran waters were given considerable latitude in carrying out their instructions to prevent an assault by the Hornet.

The Hornet sailed from New Orleans ostensibly for Cape Gracias on the northeastern coast of Nicaragua. It has not been established where the vessel received her guns. After General Bonilla captured Ruatan island,

PERUVIAN AVIATORS ARE LEARNING RAPIDLY

LIMA, Peru, Jan. 22.—The aviator Bielovucci yesterday made a flight to Callao at a height of 200 feet, circling over the warships in the harbor and returning to the race course here where he made a perfect landing.

The Peruvian aviator Tenaud, who attempted a flight, came suddenly to the ground because of an accident to his motor. He was not hurt.

Colored Bishop, Who Was Sold for $6,000, Dies at Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 22.—The Right Reverend Abraham Grant, bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal church, died at his home in Kansas City, Kan., today.

Bishop Grant had been ill for several months, but it was only two months ago that he became unable to attend to his duties. His wife, Mrs. Lula Rebecca Grant, died nine days ago.

Born in slavery at Lake City, Fla., Bishop Grant rose to the highest position in the church. An ox-cart was his first cradle; for it was there he was born, while his mother, who had just been sold, was being taken to her new home by her master. His father had been sold only a short time before.

As a boy he was sold several times, and when he was 19 years old, he brought $6,000 in Confederate money, at Columbus, Ga. After the war he returned to Lake City, Fla., where he attended a night school. He was ordained in 1873, and first preached at Jacksonville, Fla. He was transferred later to Texas, where he held the pulpits in several towns.

BREAKS RECORD FOR STAYING IN AIR

Aviator Parmalee Beats American Endurance Figures Is Up Over Three Hours.

25,000 CHEER HIS PLUCK

Other Bird-Men Make Flights. Ely Visits Mme. Tetrazinni in Aeroplane.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 22.—San Francisco's aviation meet produced a new American endurance record today when Phillip O. Parmalee, piloting a Wright biplane, remained aloft for three hours 39 minutes and 49 1-5 seconds.

The best previous endurance performance was that of A. L. Welch of St. Louis, who established a record of 3 hours 11 minutes and 55 seconds. At Los Angeles' recent meet the late Arch Hoxsey was credited with an unofficial record of three hours and 17 minutes.

A crowd of 25,000 cheered the birdman as he pursued his monotonous course, and when he finally descended he was given a rousing ovation. Several enthusiasts, among them Eugene B. Ely, hoisted Parmalee on their shoulders and carried him in triumph to a stand in the middle of Selfridge field, where Gen. Tasker L. Bliss, other army officers and a host of ladies crowded about the aviator to congratulate him.

"I could have remained up longer," said Parmalee, "but my seat grew so hard and my hands and feet so numbed with the cold that I decided to come down after clinching the American record."

His long flight was uneventful. Once, while sailing close to the San Bruno hills, on the far side of the field, he dipped suddenly and sharply in order to force gasoline into his engines.

Weather conditions were excellent today, though the bright sunshine did not wholly temper the air's nipping touch.

Ely, the darling Curtiss aviator, who landed on the deck of the cruiser Pennsylvania last Thursday, was lionized by the army and navy. With Major J. P. O'Neil, in command of the field encampment, and Captain Pond of the Pennsylvania, Ely reviewed the troops of the second battalion of the Thirtieth Infantry and a detachment of bluejackets from the warship. Then followed the presentation to the aviator of a gold medal by the army.

Ely Visits Mme. Tetrazinni.

Immediately after this ceremony, Ely went up in his biplane to deliver, on behalf of the aviation committee, an invitation to Mme. Louisa Tetrazinni, the opera singer, to attend the meeting.

Mme. Tetrazinni, according to a prearranged plan, was waiting in an automobile at the Ingleside golf links, about five miles north of the aviation field. It was Ely's intention to act as an aerial escort to the diva for the remainder of the journey to Selfridge field, but after reascending, the aviator lost her automobile among the crush of other machines on the road.

The bird-man was waiting for her at the gate, however, when she drove up, and escorted her to a gayly decorated box in the center of the grandstand, where she was formally welcomed by the aviation officials and army oficers.

Beautiful exhibition flights and military exercises kept the crowd keyed up to a high degree of interest throughout the afternoon.

Lieut. Myron S. Crissy, flying with Walter Brookins in a Wright biplane, experimented again with bomb dropping, and Charles F. Willard, the Curtiss aviator, conducted further tests in sending messages by wireless.

James F. Radley made a flight of about 20 miles over the lower end of the peninsula in his Blerlot monoplane.

Attempts by amateurs to fly added to the long list that have marked exhibitions by novices at this meet. Thaddeus S. Kerns, the youthful Chico bird imitator, stood his machine on its nose in the middle of the field. The engine was jarred through the stanchion supporting the driver's seat and Kerns had a narrow escape from serious injury.

Another novice who came to grief was George H. Loose, piloting a biplane owned by Ralph J. Shief of Alamosa. Loose negotiated the length of the field in darts and skips. On reaching a knoll near the limits of the inclosure, the aeroplane grazed the shoulder of a spectator, the machine swerved and turned on its side, completely wrecking the car. The aviator, however, was not injured.

STONE OF MANTEL DROPS, KILLING BOY

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS, Colo., Jan. 22.—Frank Luker, aged 11 years, was killed today when he was crushed by a large boulder, which formed the mantelpiece of the fireplace in his parents' home. The lad was standing in front of the fireplace looking at a picture above when the stone was dislodged.

DELAYS PROVE DANGEROUS TO BILLS

Much Legislation Wanted in Nation May Fail of Congressional Enactment.

EXTRA SESSION IS UNLIKELY

Many Important Questions Come Up Soon—Democrats Discuss Chairmanships.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—When Republican leaders in Congress were asked if there is likely to be an extra session because of the congested condition of the calendars in both branches, they invariably answer in the negative. They insist that the present short session is not now jammed more than was the short session two years ago, so far as appropriation bills are concerned.

Comparison proves the truth of the leaders' claim. Already the House has passed the Indian, rivers and harbors, pension, legislative, urgent deficiency and army appropriation bills, and is nearly through with the post-office bill. Two years ago, the House had passed only the pensions, legislative, District of Columbia and naval bills in the same time. It is true the Senate has passed only the urgent deficiency bill, but two years ago only the legislative bill had been passed.

Senate leaders are not disturbed by the situation. Two years ago 13 big appropriation bills were passed in the last four weeks of the session and the Republican leaders say what has been done can be done.

Some senators believe no particular effort has been made to prevent congestion and that appropriation bills have been delayed to kill off general legislation. It would surprise no one if members opposed to votes on the Lorimer case, the resolution providing for the election of senators by direct vote of the people, the tariff commission bill and other controversial matters, should be victorious in their effort.

The ship subsidy bill is being used as a buffer and there are several treaty matters that may be brought in if needed to kill time.

Democratic Gossip.

Gossip among Democratic members of the House is directed toward the meeting called for next Friday night of the four Democrats of the new ways and means committee. These will select the Democratic members of a new rules committee and map out a program for the preparation of tariff legislation. It virtually is conceded that Representative Henry of Texas, once a speakership candidate, and a leading minority member of the judiciary committee, will head the new rules committee in succession to Dalzell of Pennsylvania, the retiring Republican chairman.

The committee will not be enlarged, the change in the political complexion of the House leaving that committee with six Democrats and four Republicans instead of six Republicans and four Democrats as at present.

Besides Chairman Henry, the Democrats whose names have been brought forward in the conference over the rules committee personnel include: Hardwick of Georgia, Fitzgerald of New York, Pou of North Carolina, Littleton of New York, Garret of Tennessee, Wilson of Pennsylvania, and Graham of Illinois.

Mr. Fitzgerald is a candidate for the chairmanship of the appropriations committee, which may eliminate him from the rules committee, of which he is now a minority member. Mr. Pou was on the ways and means committee but gave way to Mr. Kitchin of his own state.

In the selection of chairmanships, Chairman Underwood and his colleagues on the ways and means committee, which is vested with that function, will be guided by several considerations, mainly qualification and seniority of service. Seniority, how-

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS MAY TERMINATE FIGHT

HELENA, Mont., Jan. 22. Chief interest in the senatorial situation tonight centers in the Republican caucus to be held tomorrow evening. Although the Republicans have three less than the required number to elect, the exceptionally strong pressure being brought to bear upon Republican members known to be opposed to Senator Carter to enter the caucus, leads many to suppose that a strong effort will be made to force the reelection of the present senator. Mr. Carter's closest friends in Helena, however, deny that there is anything on his account, and assert that Senator Carter will not accept a reelection if it would in any way appear to be asked. No progress was made by the Republican leaders today in their efforts to get the four insurgent Republicans into the caucus. The Republicans now holding out are Senators Meyers, Everett and Wilcome and Representative Hinkins, while Representative Tolman has asked to be taken off the caucus call.

WIRE PRESIDENT TAFT Today!

The solid South is using sectionalism and political methods to prevent an exposition in the West. Impress upon the President that the West AS A UNIT demands the settlement of the exposition question on bigger and broader lines. Keep the wires busy. Impress the President with your earnestness by the number of telegrams he receives and the number of people interested.

There Is No Solid West Appreciated in Washington Today

The West has never been a believer in sectionalism. It realizes the bentfit of running the government on broader business lines, but the solid South is demanding political recognition for New Orleans as the exposition city based entirely upon Southern sentiment.

All the arguments in favor of San Francisco, all the advantages of location, climate and financial backing, have been given absolutely no consideration whatever.

To Compel Recognition of the Rightful Claims of the West, Prompt, Vigorous, United Action Is Imperative

Every Commercial Organization;
Every Labor Union;
Every Fraternal Society;
Every Civic Body in Every City;
Every Business House;
Every Individual in the West;

Telegraph to President Taft today, and by the very number of telegrams he receives, impress him with your earnestness, your enthusiasm, your sincerity and with the unbounded interest of the West in demanding that which it has a right to expect from the administration it has so strongly supported.

A Solid South Committee in Congress Has Reported Favorably a Bill to Create an International Exposition at New Orleans

Mind you, this was done against San Francisco's simple request that Congress authorize the President of the United States to invite the nations of the world to participate in an exposition in 1915 created and wholly financed by the people of the West, without government aid. This big business proposition of the West, backed by Seventeen and a Half Million Dollars ($17,500,000) already available, with millions to follow, has been turned down by a solid South committee in Congress in favor of Southern sentiment.

Telegraph today. Impress the President and his party leaders by the very number of telegrams received and the interests represented.

Send your wire now, using the following form as an example of the arguments which should be represented:

William H. Taft, President of the United States, Washington, D. C.:

The West expects you and your party leaders to use all the force and power at your command to settle the exposition matter on broad business lines.

(Signed) .....

Also telegraph your business connections, affiliations and friends east of the Rocky Mountains to wire their congressmen and also the President at Washington to support San Francisco as the exposition city.

As this matter comes before Congress, Tuesday, January 24th, it is imperative that you act at once.

Schenk Case Arguments Will Start Today; Jury Will Begin Consideration Wednesday

WHEELING, W. Va., Jan. 22.—That arguments will begin tomorrow in the case against Mrs. Laura Farnsworth Schenk, charged with administering poison to her husband, John O. Schenk, was practically determined after a long conference today between prosecutor Handland and his assistant, Fred L. Murray.

The case probably wil go to the jury not later than Wednesday noon. A full day will be given to each side for arguments.

There never has been a criminal case in the history of this state fought more bitterly. The state has shown through analysis by expert chemists that mineral water which John O. Schenk drank in his home and that medicine administered in his home was charged with arsenic and sugar of lead, that Mrs. Schenk had improper relations with another man and that she had expressed a wish that her husband would die.

The state has produced a witness who swore that Mrs. Schenk offered $1,000 to put poison in her husband's medicine after he was removed to the hospital, that she purchased sugar of lead from a physician in quantity sufficient to kill a dozen men, and that John O. Schenk was suffering from arsenical and lead poisoning.

On the other hand the state has not shown whether the defendant purchased arsenic, no evidence has been adduced to prove that she actually put the drugs in the water and medicine. The defense has claimed throughout there was a conspiracy on the part of other members of the Schenk family to rid themselves of the woman under trial and put on a witness to prove that Albert Schenk, head of the family, said he would leave no stone unturned to accomplish that purpose.

Three star witnesses for the prosecution in the trial of Mrs. Laura Farnsworth Schenk, charged with poisoning her millionaire husband John O. Schenk. The sketch is of Mrs. Eleanor Kline, the detective nurse who, according to her testimony, was offered $1,000 to murder Schenk while he was under her care; to her left is Miss Alma Evans, another nurse, whose testimony has been of great help to the prosecution, and below is Dan Z Phillips, the youthful lover of Mrs. Schenk.

HORNET SEIZURE

Then, it is said, the Hornet was transferred from her owners to the revolutionists for a consideration of one dollar and a mortgage on the vessel. The Hornet was immediately transferred from American to Honduran registry and raised the Honduran flag, but the Honduran papers were issued by the Bonilla appointees. The validity of these papers is one of the questions that are now being looked into. Officials here generally regard them as irregular.

CEIBA, Honduras, Jan. 22.—Via New Orleans by wireless—Great excitement was caused here today when it became known that the United States cruiser Tacoma had "arrested" the revolutionary gunboat Hornet at Truxillo.

It is not known what effect the seizure will have on General Bonilla's operations. Reports have reached here that for more than a week he has been mobilizing troops at Nueva Armenia, 28 miles east of here, on the coast, preparatory to an attack.

Ceiba appears to have more generals, captains and other minor military officers than ordinary soldiers, and the government has experienced considerable trouble in enlisting loyal privates. Trenches have been built on the outskirts of Ceiba and government officials express confidence in their ability to defend the town.

A CURE FOR PROGRESSIVE PARALYSIS BELIEVED FOUND

VIENNA, Jan. 22.—After three years' experimentation, Prof. Wagner Von Jauregg of the University of Vienna, claims to have cured 23 per cent of cases of progressive paralysis, out of 1,500 patients by injections of Koch's tuberculin.

The disease has been considered incurable.

Charles R. Flint, who, it is believed, will become the possessor of the estate in Russia of the late Count Tolstoi. Michael Kousminsky, a nephew of the late author and reformer, who came to New York from Russia about 10 days ago to try to find a purchaser of his uncle's estate, has announced that Mr. Flint will take the property under certain conditions. In accordance with the wishes of the late reformer 150 acres of the 750-acre estate, are to be set aside for a Tolstoi settlement. Mr. Flint has made an offer to purchase the estate, on condition that the 150 acres for the Tolstoi settlement and the cost of erecting a school of agriculture, a hospital and a library, should be paid for by an international subscription fund, to which admirers of the late count might send donations. On the remaining 600 acres Mr. Flint proposes to erect a permanent exhibition of American agricultural machinery and cultivate the surrounding land by modern methods, to demonstrate to the Russian farmers how they can produce twice the amount of crops on their favorite lands and save labor and expense.

NEGROES QUIT TOWN IN FEAR OF THEIR LIVES

HOMINY, Okla., Jan. 22.—Following the posting of notices, threatening all negroes if they did not "quit the town," something would happen, the last of 150 negroes left Hominy early Sunday morning. Explosions heard in various parts of the town within ten days increased the negroes' alarm.

The trouble started two months ago when negro tenants were given leases on cotton lands. White farmers objected and the posting of notices followed. The explosions are thought to have been "plants," intended only to frighten the negroes.

SCHOONER AGROUND. SAYS THE WIRELESS

MARSHFIELD, Ore., Jan. 22.—The gasoline schooner Wilhelmina of Astoria, is aground on the south spit at the mouth of Umpqua river, 20 miles north of here. She is reported to be in a dangerous position. A life-saving station is near and the crew have doubtless been taken off.

The Wilhelmina was en route from Coos Bay to Gardiner to take cargo. All wire communication along the coast is cut off and it is impossible to get details of the Wilhelmina's mishap.

An Oklahoma traction company has adopted a pay-as-you-enter car that dispenses with a conductor, passengers entering and leaving by the front platform under the eye of the motorman.

NEGRO LYNCHED IN MEXICO

EL PASO, Jan. 22.—Chihuahua newspapers received here today contain an account of the execution without trial of a negro named Farrel, near Madero, last Thursday. The paper states that Farrel, who had made himself obnoxious both to insurrectos and officers of the Madero Lumber company was arrested and placed in jail. At night he was taken out by a squad of mounted men and shot.

CANNON'S COUNTY STILL REEKING

DANVILLE, Ill., Jan. 22.—Vote traffickers in Vermilion county, Ill., the home of Speaker Cannon, are facing a situation perhaps duplicating the conditions in Adams county, O.

Court officials have made it known that every opportunity will be given for the acknowledgement of the misdemeanor and for a general cleaning up.

Whether such action will succeed, depends on whether those who are called before the grand jury see fit to tell what they know.

Judge Kimbrough charged the jury a week ago that "now was as good a time to clear up the political atmosphere in which the county lived as any."

PROTEST AGAINST TAKING OF CRETE BY TURKEY

New York Greeks Say That It Will Mean a Revolution Costing Millions of Dollars.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—That any effort on the part of the Ottoman empire to coerce the Cretans would result in another revolution was the sentiment voiced at a mass meeting of the Greek colony here today.

The meeting was convoked by the Pan-Hellenic union, representing 8,000 Greeks in the vicinity of New Y[illegible] to protest against the alleged intention of European powers to hand over the island of Crete to Turkey. The sentiment of the meeting was voiced by professor M. Ion, of Boston university, the only speaker to address the gathering in English.

"If Turkey attempts to coerce the Cretans, the Otteman empire will have another revolution on its hands. It cost millions of dollars to fight the Cretans before and it will cost millions more if another attempt at subjection is made."

The meeting adopted resolutions calling upon President Taft and Congress to oppose any effort to subject the Cretans to Turkish sovereignty and asked that the President remind the powers that the interests of peace demanded that Crete be incorporated with the kingdom of Greece.

BARBER THOUGHT TO HAVE STOT STEPSON FOR $500

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—The badly decomposed body found in the rear of the barber shop of Giorgio Rabaglita, on San Fernando street, last night, was identified today as that of Joe Castiglineo, the barber's stepson.

Rabaglita, who was a block away when the police broke into the barber shop, attempted suicide by shooting himself in the neck. Although not necessarily serious, his wound has affected his speech and when he confessed last night that he had committed the murder, he did not give the name of his victim.

Castiglineo, who was 23 years old, withdrew $500 from a bank a month ago. It is believed by the police that it was to secure this money that Rabaglita shot Castiglineo. The barber shop had been closed for a month but Rabagilta had been seen to visit the place during that time.

JAPS WHO ATTACKED U. S. CONSUL GIVEN LIGHT FINE

VICTORIA, B. C., Jan. 22.—The Japanese who assaulted United States Vice Consul Williamson, at Dairy last month, were convicted and given a light fine, according to news brought today by the steamship Onfa, from Yokohama. The men were reprimanded and assessed a fine of $2.50 each.

STEAMER THAT SENT S. O. S. CALLS, IS SAFE

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 22.—The fishing steamer Chicago, which sent out distress calls last night, is safe and is coming to Seattle under her own steam, according to a wireless message received by her owners tonight.

The message said that the Chicago went ashore in Milbank strait, British Columbia, last night, and was slightly damaged. This was the occasion for sending out the distress signals, which brought every wireless station on the north coast into action in an effort to locate the disabled vessel and send assistance to the 40 men aboard her.

The message received tonight said that temporary repairs were effected and the vessel is proceeding to Seattle. Captain Johansen said that he is in no need of assistance.

REVENUE CUTTER GETS DISABLED VESSEL

SAVANAH, Ga., Jan. 22.—A message received here tonight from the revenue cutter Yamacraw, which was ordered to go to the rescue of the disabled steamer Fannie Chart, reports that she has the steamer in tow and is proceeding to Miami, Fla. The steamer was picked up south of Cape Canaveral.

EXPORTS INCREASED OVER $126,000,000

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The exports of the United States increased in the principal articles of trade more than $126,000,000 in 1910 over the outgoing commerce of the previous year, according to figures compiled by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor.

Exports in manufactured articles showed increases in nearly every line while the exportation of foodstuffs decreased in nearly all classes.

The total exports for 1910 reached $1,827,100,000, while those of 1909 were 1,700,000,000.

Figures thus far received by the bureau indicate the total values of foodstuffs exported in 1910 will be about $345,000,000, against $400,000,000 in 1909 and the value of manufactured articles will reach $825,000,000, against $721,000,000 the previous year.

BIG CHURCH MEETING HELD IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—The interests of 32 religious denominations, embracing 100,000 ministers and about 16,000,000 members are represented at the annual meeting of the executive committee of the federal council of the Churches of Christ of America, which begins a two-day session here Tuesday night.

The council itself, consisting of 400 officially-appointed representatives of the various denominations, holds its general meeting every fourth year, while the executive committee of 60 meets annually.

President Taft will receive the executive committee at the White House Wednesday, when Bishop E. R. Hendrix of the Methodist Episcopal church, president of the council, will present the greetings of that body to the chief executive.

Reports of the secretaries of the various districts into which the council has divided its work will be received and there will be discussions with a view to furthering the economy policy in mission work, both at home and abroad, and the federative idea among churches the world over.

He was arrested on the charge of disturbing the peace and a large crowd which had paid to see the pictures was given the admission money and told there would be no show.

CHILD DIES FROM ALLEGED CRUELTY

NORFOLK, Neb., Jan. 22—Three-year-old Kuart Steher died this afternoon from the effects of the amputation of both feet last Thursday. The feet had been frozen several weeks previously and were in a decomposed condition when a physician was called.

It is alleged the child slept nightly in an unheated woodshed in the coldest weather.

Henry Steher, the child's stepfather is in jail awaiting an investigation of the case.

NEED MORE JEWS, SAYS JACOB SCHIFF

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—The United States needs more Jews, says Jacob H. Schiff, the banker and philanthropist.

Addressing a gathering in the Education Alliance building today, at the annual meeting of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigration Aid society, he said:

"There are not enough Hebrews in this country. Statistics show that the Hebrew population is but 2 per cent of the total, and 5 per cent would not be too much."

WHAT ROYAL TRIPS COST

From the Chicago Record-Herald.

South Africa is agog with excitement over the visit of the Duke of Connaught to inaugurate the union. Already a considerable amount of money has been spent in anticipation—cleaning up buildings, remaking roads, and building a special royal train that will have cost a thousand or two.

Although King George has traveled more extensively than any other royal personage, his bills have not run into a very large amount. Thus the trip to Australia was estimated at $750,000, which is not a large sum, taking everything into consideration—the chartering of a special steamer for so long a time, the expenses of a naval escort and traveling charges. His little jaunt to Canada a year or two ago was done for the modest figure of $10,000, but the tour in India in 190_ cost a large sum, although the exact total has never been published, as a good deal of the expenditure came out of the royal purse. Parliament voted $100,000, while the cost of altering the Renown was borne by the naval estimates, and most of the ceremonial charges by India. The total probably came to about a million.

This was not so much as that incurred by King Edward's visit to India as Prince of Wales in 1875. This tour was arranged by Sir Bartle Frere, who was kept busy for seven months making all the arrangements. Parliament voted $300,000 for the general expenses, which Sir Bartle said was quite inadequate, as the presents to native princes amounted to nearly that sum, and he asked for $500,000. This was not forthcoming, so he made the best of matters by going to Lord Northbrook, the viceroy, who induced the Indian treasury to grant another $50,000 to the presents fund.

People in England thought that the $500,000, together with the $2,000,000 which came out of the naval estimates was too much and there was actually a meeting of protest. Even Mr. Fawcett protested in the house of commons, but public opinion became reconciled when it was seen that the prince was not merely having a holiday at the country's expense. Presents to native princes ate up the nice little sum of $200,000, which was really very small when we consider it was generally estimated that he received gifts worth pretty well $2,000,000, one Maharajah offering him a jeweled sword, while English shopkeepers and manufacturers netted some $1,000,000 out of the presents sent from England. The total cost of the trip was considerably over $1,500,000.

Everyone remembers the spectacular trip of the kaiser to the holy land some 10 or 12 years ago. As Messrs. Cook arranged that tour the exact cost has not been made public, although it is reported to have amounted to more than $25,000. But the kaiser can be lavish when he likes, and his visit to Helenberg a year ago cost $175,000, although he was only there one hour.

Royal visits to foreign countries are usually borne by the king's own privy purse, although if he is engaged in national business he may receive a grant in aid.

In Persia there are no distilleries nor breweries and native wine is the only intoxicating beverage used.

CHANCELLOR SAYS HE WILL FIGHT CONSUMPTION

LONDON, Jan. 22. In a letter to Hall Caine, who has been advocating government measures to stamp out consumption, principally through the state taking charge of the consumptives, David Lloyd George, chancellor of the exchequer, returns he has already considered the possibility of dealing with the problem in connection with his insurance scheme of invalidity insurance.

The chancellor says the principal difficulty is financial, and that it will be especially hard to estimate the maximum contribution that can be levied upon workmen.

TWO DEAD FOLLOWING BAD SALOON FIGHT

MELLEN, Wis., Jan. 22. Albert J. McAdams of Superior and John Gordon of this city are dead following a street fight which originated in a saloon late last night. Martin Miller, a woodsman, is charged with the killing.

The Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava, formerly Miss Florence Davis of New York, on the left and Mme. Donalda, the famous opera prima donna whom she supported in her first public concert in London recently. As a result of the marchioness' great success in her first public appearance London society is wondering whether she will heed the call to a professional career. Lady Dufferin declares she appeared in public simply as an act of friendship to Mme. Donalda, the famous Canadian singer, and has not the faintest idea of going on the stage. However, she is coaxing the reports that she is to sing in opera with Mme. Donalda. In Paris a few years ago, before her husband was secretary of the British legation, Lady Dufferin frequently sang in private salons for charity. She studied under the best teachers in Paris and all declared she should go on the operatic stage that the world might hear her sweet voice.

CONTRACTOR'S BODY FOUND DISFIGURED

CINCINNATI, Jan. 22. Hacked to shreds and disfigured almost beyond identification, the body of George Washington Hall, a contractor, was found inside the storm door of his residence today.

What the Press Agents Say

"MADAME X" TONIGHT

Expert critics in New York, Paris, London and other world-cities where "Madame X" has been scoring so great a triumph unite in the verdict that it is the most powerful emotional drama within memory. They have not hesitated to say that this play by Alexander Bisson holds in the hearts of the present generation of play-goers a place comparable to that held in years gone by by such famous works as "Article 47," "Camille," or the wonderful Sardou tetralogy—"La Tosca," "Gismonda," "Fedora" and "Cleopatra."

Added to the tremendous emotional power of "Madame X" there is a realism, a fidelity to the actual things of life that sets it on an even higher plane than any of those famous forbears. While beyond all this, "Madame X" deals with the greatest of all human feeling—Mother Love. It is this that has made the drama so potently appealing to all races and all nationalities. In its author's native Paris, in London, in Berlin, in New York the play has fairly swept the playgoing public off its feet, while even the most critical-minded persons have found its appeal almost irresistible.

Henry W. Savage, who has the producing rights of the play for America and all other English-speaking countries has staged the drama exactly as it was done at the Theater Porte St. Martin, Paris, preserving intact all the intricate detail of that play's action made under the author's personal supervision. Mr. Savage will offer "Madame X" at the Opera House tonight with a splendid company of metropolitan players. The prices are 50 cents, $1.00, $1.50 and $2.00.

CLYDE FITCH'S COMEDY, "GIRLS"

The attraction at the Opera House Saturday matinee and night will be Clyde Fitch's remarkable comedy success, "Girls," which played for one whole year at Daly's Theater, New York.

"Girls" is a comedy satirizing the bachelor girl, her aims and ambitions, and her utter defeat when brought face to face with love.

There are three girls in the comedy, all bachelor girls living a precarious existence in a studio apartment in New York. One is a secretary to a law firm, one is a stenographer and the third is a stage-struck girl. They swear never to marry, but when a good looking man enters their apartment by mistake each begins to think of love.

In the second act they all obtain positions but subsequently lost them, on account of their independence. The third act finds them living in greater poverty than ever, but each in turn is won over by the right man. The three romances are closely interwoven and there is in addition an abundance of humor, character study and observance of the foibles of the sex.

The first act showing the studio is remarkable for the fact that the three girls are shown in the act of retiring, yet the scene is so delicately handled that it arouses only amusement. The scene is one of the best Mr. Fitch has ever manufactured and is handled with the utmost skill. The cast supplied is one of metropolitan excellence, while the production is exceedingly elaborate.

JOY FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS AT MAJESTIC, AND OLD ONES, TOO

Did you, little boys and girls, ever have a cat for a pet, that you liked real well? And if you did, has it ever happened that she took it unto herself to stray away from home?

And did you miss her a whole lot while she was gone and wish, and wish that she would come back to you? And how you searched for the dear pussy all over the neighborhood until you found her. Do you remember?

Well there is a little girl living in Colorado Springs just now who has the worstest worstest cat you ever saw. She actually gets lost three times a day, and three times a day she gets found. But she worries her little mistress while she is away. Her mistress is Polly Pickle. She came to Colorado Springs, Saturday, and with her pets she is at the Majestic theater. "Polly Pickle's Pets in Petland," that's what they call them.

My but they are funny. There's the cat Pinky. She's immense. Then there's Peregrint the elephant. He's awfully funny. No. 3 is Push, a dog. Gee but he can jump and growl. Next comes Polly's "Teddy bear." The last is Punch, a parrot. Hasn't Polly got a big and happy family though? Wouldn't you like to have all these pets? But Pinky causes the most trouble. She's something awful. She runs around o' nights and Polly has a terrible time with her.

Polly Pickle is a dandy girl. But can't she sing, though. Her best song is "The Jack-o'-Lantern Man," with Pinky and Push and Teddy bear gathered closely around her. They hug Polly tight because they are real scared that the Jack-o'-Lantern man will steal them. The funniest Jack-o'-Lanterns bob out all over the stage and even hang down from the sky of Petland.

Besides all these things there are more. "A Bushel of Busters," Polly calls them. They are Peter Peck and Paul Peck and Philip Peck—all the Pecks in fact. When the curtain goes up they sing and dance until Pinky appears. Then they go away, but soon after come back all dressed up as kittycats and help Polly to sing "Has Anyone Seen a Kittycat?"

"Polly Pickle's Pets in Petland" is too good for any one to miss. Children will crowd the Majestic this week to see the beautiful little musical fantasy. It will only be here for a short time and there's nothing like it to entertain the youngsters, old or young.

SCENE FROM "MADAME X."

Alexander Bisson's Strong Drama Will Be Seen at the Opera House Tonight for the First Time. Henry W. Savage, Who Presents the Play, Is Sending a Strong Company, Including Adeline Dunlap, Robert Ober and Howard Gould.

MONDAY, JANUARY 23, 1911.

PARTY VITALITY.

IT is hardly reasonable to expect sane political discussion at a Jackson Day dinner, especially one held in this year of grace 1911. The Democratic victory of last November is so recent that party orators have not entirely recovered their balance, and particularly over the festive board their utterances are likely to be inspired more by exuberance than sanity.

In Baltimore, the other night, Champ Clark, Governor Harmon, Senator Bailey and a number of other Democratic celebrities gathered to do honor to the Democratic donkey and the sacred memory of Andrew Jackson. The speakers were in such fine fettle that before the meeting broke up nearly everybody present was "mentioned" for the presidential nomination, and it was freely assumed that the nomination for 1912 will be equivalent to an election. "The whole breed of elephants," declared one enthusiast, "will be exterminated in 1912."

This is the sort of wild-eyed prognostication that always follows a political landslide. The party that has just been swept from power is doomed to total destruction. The vote shows that it has lost popular confidence, that it is no longer the party of the people, that it has outlived its usefulness, etc., etc., etc.

But somehow these predictions never are verified. For instance, the Democratic party has been out of power for forty-two of the last fifty years. For more than one-half of the two Cleveland administrations, during which it nominally had control of the government, it dominated only one branch of Congress. In 1894, only two years after it had been returned to power by a sweeping majority, it lost control of Congress in a landslide quite as remarkable as the one of last November.

That was the beginning of a series of reverses repeated at every election until last November. Again and again the assertion was made that the Democratic party was on the verge of dissolution, that it could not survive such disastrous defeats, but it is still with us, apparently as young as ever, and as serene in its confidence in the future.

...OSPECTS OF THE G. O. P.

But the prospects of the Democratic party in its hour of victory are no better than those of the Republicans in their hour of defeat. Two months ago the Republican party was utterly routed in almost every state in the nation. It had sustained a rebuff which everybody knew was coming as a consequence of its own misdeeds. The rebuff was unavoidable, and it was necessary. It was the one thing needed to bring the party to its senses and make inevitable the reorganization which has been under way for two years, or since the insurgent movement attained prominence.

The Democratic victory last November purged the Republican party of an element of which it had long struggled to purge itself. It retired a number of the most influential standpatters. Aldrich, Hale, Burrows, Tawney and Depew might, and probably would, have been eliminated before long, even if the Republicans had won the last election, but the Democratic victory hastened and made certain their retirement. When the present Congress comes to an end they and a number of other Republicans who follow their lead will pass out of public life and the party will be immeasurably strengthened thereby.

The elimination of this element will make the Republican party the party of the people in a truer sense than can possibly apply to the Democratic party. There is no lack of sound, progressive leaders. Cummins, LaFollette, Borah, Bristow, in the Senate, and Murdock, Norris, Madison, and a dozen others in the House, are in a better position now to carry on the fight for progressive Republicanism than ever before. President Taft is showing an increasing tendency to break away from the influences and associations which cost him so much of his popularity in the first half of his term, and it is entirely reasonable to assume that the administration will strengthen its hold on the public more and more during the coming year.

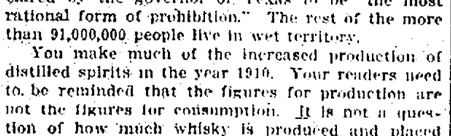

The Republican party has never been lacking in recuperative power. It does not often sustain a nationwide defeat, but when it does, it is generally able to bob up serenely two years later and present a united front to the enemy. Judging by present indications this is what can be expected in 1912. It is a little premature to predict "the extermination of the whole breed of elephants" in that year.

THE ANANIAS CLUB.

MR. ROOSEVELT lives and learns, but somehow he does not seem to grow any wiser. Two or three years ago, even one year ago, the public accepted his eccentricities with smiling approval, even with enthusiasm. One of the eccentricities which sober-thinking people had some trouble overlooking was the reckless fashion in which he catapulted worthy citizens into the Ananias Club. Occasionally there was a shadow of reason for believing that the real Ananias was not the latest initiate, but the founder of the club, but this was generally overlooked. Mr. Roosevelt's judgment in this, as in most other matters, was accepted as final, and the people who were unwillingly added to the roster of his famous organization were kept there. But as the club grew older its membership was expanded so largely that the public began to wonder if Mr. Roosevelt was invariably right and his enemies invariably wrong.

This suspicion has deepened into a conviction. T. R. is a great and good man, but is he so great and so good that he simply cannot be wrong? Is everybody whose memory of a conversation differs from his, or who disputes his opinion on any question, necessarily a liar? T. R. thinks so, and to vindicate his own honesty and show that he is still in fighting trim, he does not hesitate now and then to propose a new name for the club, constitute himself nomination committee, governing board and the whole works, and then initiate the new member into the organization.

The evidence in the case of Butler Ames is so incomplete that it would be invidious to suggest that he is not the real liar. But though we remain stanch in our admiration of Mr. Roosevelt, we cannot allay a feeling of mild wonderment. Is he the only man in the country who invariably tells the truth, or perish the thought! does he sometimes stretch it for the sake of adding a new name to the Ananias Club?

THE LICENSE QUESTION.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

In your editorial of yesterday you mention the inaugural address of the governor of Alabama, in which he recommends local option as a substitute for prohibition. Inasmuch as we are under a local option law in Colorado Springs, we are glad to have such indorsement. The attitude of the governor of Alabama is quite in line with that part of the message of the governor of Texas, in which, The Gazette tells us, he "favors local option as 'the most rational form of prohibition.'" Again we are glad to know that here in Colorado Springs we are under "the most rational form."

You make bold to generalize on the failure of the law in Alabama, simply because the attorney general calls attention to violations "in several of the large cities of the state." As Governor Stubbs of Kansas says, "If there were no violation, such a law would not be necessary." As to whether the law has been a failure, or not, can best be determined by a study of the court records in Alabama. The figures from numerous cities show an immense reduction in crime in general.

You say that more than one-half of the United States is dry. This is true with reference to area, but not with reference to population, as the people would think from your editorial. Only 15,602,935 people in the United States live under a prohibitory law; 23,255,624 live in counties or cities which are under the local option law—the law which is recommended by the governor of Alabama, and declared by the governor of Texas to be "the most rational form of prohibition." The rest of the more than 91,000,000 people live in wet territory.

You make much of the increased production of distilled spirits in the year 1910. Your readers need to be reminded that the figures for production are not the figures for consumption. It is not a question of how much whisky is produced and placed in government warehouses, where it is usually stored for years before being released for consumption. It is a question of how much is released for consumption. But even on the matter of production your figures for 1910 are too high by 1,213,228.7 gallons. Moreover, you failed to tell the people that even with the enormous production in 1910, the figures are still 12,336,386.5 gallons under the amount produced in 1907. The year 1907 is the date when both production and consumption reached their highest figures. Several states entered the dry column about that time and the annual consumption of distilled liquors fell off 19,337,488.5 gallons within two years. For 10 years preceding 1907, the average annual increase had been 6,536,992 gallons. Not only was the increase stopped, but a large reduction was made in the amount annually consumed. As can be seen at a glance, the country was getting wetter all the time under a license system. The figures for consumption had nearly doubled within 10 years. It could hardly be expected, therefore, that the decrease with the minority would for all time offset the increase in consumption, with the majority. So, by 1910 there had been an increase over the year 1909. In view of the rapid annual increase prior to 1907, it is fair to assume that unless there had been some serious blow to the trade, the average annual increase for the years following 1907 would have been about what the average was for the 10 years immediately preceding. On this basis, had there been no blow to the trade, the figures for 1910 would have been 153,642,042 gallons. The actual consumption in 1910, with all the boasted increase over 1909, was only 126,384,726.7. It is easy to see that the whisky trade has suffered a terrific blow since 1907. Something not only stopped the rapid increase, but effected such an actual reduction that even the increase in wet territory in 1910 did not suffice to bring the figures up to those of 1907.

Two causes are suggested. First, the fact that several states became dry about that time. Second, the panic of 1907. A study of figures for the panic years of 1893 and 1896, when financial and industrial conditions were far worse than in 1907, show that the per capita consumption of liquors increased steadily and rapidly. The brewers and distillers in their frantic work against every local option and prohibition effort show that they do not believe the little panic of 1907 is responsible for that tremendous decrease in consumption immediately following that year. There evidently was an increase in production in the wet states in 1910, but the government figures show that in the dry states not half as much whisky was produced as in the year 1909.

The matter of chief concern is a question neither of the amount consumed nor of the amount produced, however interesting it may be to note the reduction in consumption, in spite of several millions added to our population since 1907. (The figures have to do with distilled spirits only, as you seem to think that whisky is the important article which is smuggled into dry territory). The liquor question is a social question. The inquiry should be as to whether crime, poverty and pauperism are produced under a no-license system. It might be well for The Gazette to pursue this line of inquiry and publish the results for the guidance of the voters. Much material is available, but one case is sufficient. Dry Kansas gave out the following facts at the close of the year 1909: Nearly half of the counties had sent no convicts to the penitentiary during the 12 months. More than half of the county jails were without a convicted prisoner. More than half of the counties had no inmates at their poor farms. The governor also stated that while the population of the state had increased 100 per cent under a prohibitory law, the number of convicts in the penitentiary had increased only 17 per cent. The law is enforced in Kansas, and it can be enforced in Colorado Springs. With such enforcement as we have enjoyed, which was hindered by men who should have helped, the court records still show a large reduction in crime. Give the local option law a square deal.

FAMOUS WOOINGS ONE OF THEM.

From the Arkansas City Traveler.

Another Arkansas City young man figures in a romance which was consummated when Mrs. Martha Clark, a charming young widow of wealth, popularity and refinement, of Chicago, and Jay Mack Love, Jr., of Whittier, Cal., were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The whole affair is delightfully romantic. Miss Belle Scott of Pawhuska, Okla., went to California last summer to spend the warm weather period. On the Pullman she was attracted to a very dainty and attractive piece of femininity. She struck up an acquaintance with the young woman, who proved to be Mrs. Clark. Mrs. Clark invited Miss Scott to call upon her, which invitation was accepted.

Miss Scott and Mr. Love were old Arkansas City friends, and imagine Miss Scott's delight at meeting Mr. Love one day on the streets of Los Angeles. One evening she suggested to Jay that he accompany her to the home of this charming young woman. Jay Love has always been one of the most popular young men in his set, and especially with the women. As a football hero at the University of Kansas and at Ann Arbor, Mich., he was satiated with society and beautiful women. Heretofore he had admired them all. He had been their champion, their good friend and accommodating companion. With all this past of women friends who can criticise him adversely if he yawned and said, "Yes, he would go?"

The Daily Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

I'm going to make you acquainted with two women whom I know, and tell you a little poem that I love, today.

The connection and the comment I leave to you.

The first woman is an old acquaintance of mine. She lives in a beautiful home not far from mine. She has been married about 20 years but has no children. They say she is glad because she dislikes children. Sometimes they say more than that. The empty home is the disappointment of her husband's life. He has a more than ample income and is always urging her to adopt some "lonely baby," but she absolutely refuses.

She belongs to two bridge clubs and one civic improvement club, and is on the committee for "the suppression of unnecessary noise."

She keeps her house immaculate. She keeps but two maids at a time, but has had nine different ones altogether in the last year.

She is the kind of woman who lodges complaints against shop girls, street car conductors, etc. Last year just before Christmas a girl fagged out with the Christmas rush, went out into the street discharged at Madame's complaint that she had answered her sharply. From another girl at that counter came the story that Madame had been shown about 15 heavy boxes, and then on not finding what she wanted had insisted the girl was not trying to find it. The story also ran that the girl—who was extremely pretty by the way—went out into the streets the day before Christmas saying that she was not going to try any more—it wasn't any use.

The other woman, whom I met in the course of my newspaper work two years ago, is a woman about whom the tongue of rumor is continually saying cruel things. How much is true, I don't know. I don't want to know. What I do know is this: She supports her father and mother and not only supports them with money but with love.

I don't think she ever said an unkind word about anybody or passed a beggar by without giving. There is a girl in the city who tells this story about her. She, the young girl, came to the city looking for work, spent her savings without getting it and on Thanksgiving day was wandering the streets penniless. She met this woman, whom she knew slightly. The woman on finding out her trouble insisted on lending her five dollars and later found her work. Subsequently the girl discovered, through very roundabout channels, that the five dollars was not only the woman's last cent, but a very treasured pocketpiece which, even in her own worst extremity, she had never parted with.

There is a fine young man in our community with a splendid wife and baby and an ideal home, who owes everything to this woman. She found him a desperate young fool ready for any vice. She saw the worth in him, and helped him find himself. And then when he would have married her in gratitude, she refused because she loved him too well.

I don't believe that anyone ever suffered more than she did at this time, and yet through it all, she kept her fine cheerfulness and her marvelous interest in other people's needs, which makes her unique in a world filled with people saddening the earth with their troubles.

The poem is by Joaquin Miller. Perhaps you already know it and love it as I do.

In men whom men pronounce divine,
I find so much of sin and blot;
In men whom men denounce as ill
I find so much of goodness still,
I hesitate to draw the line
Between the two, when God has not.

SECEDING SENATORS ARE STANDING PAT

WHEELING, W. Va., Jan. 22.—The mission to Cincinnati undertaken by Joseph Chilton, a brother of William E. Chilton, recently chosen by the Democrats of West Virginia for the long-term senatorship, in which he was to offer terms to the 15 self-exiled Republican state senators, has failed, according to advices received here tonight. Governor Glasscock, it appears, must say the word before the Republicans will return to West Virginia.

The following statement has been received from Senator Meridith, spokesman for the exiles from Cincinnati, tonight:

"The visit of Joseph H. Chilton to Cincinnati was for the purpose of getting us to call off our exile and return to that state in order to elect his brother and Mr. Watson, the United States senators from West Virginia. However, the visit was without the desired effect.

We told him, as we have told other representatives of the Democratic politicians in West Virginia, that we shall remain here until such a time as Governor Glasscock wishes us to return. Whether that time is February 27, or tomorrow, it matters very little to me.

Is Up to Governor.

"In matters of this kind we will abide by the decision of Governor Glasscock, who is on the ground, rather than by the representatives of the Democrats.

"In every way the situation remains just as it was before the visit of Mr. Chilton. Naturally he is interested in his brother's candidacy. Naturally, however, we are interested in getting what the Republicans want, and shall remain here until the word comes direct from the governor to return."

Senator Meridith said the senators will remain in Cincinnati over tomorrow because he has received no word from the governor.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 22.—After dining this evening at the home of Charles P. Taft, brother of President Taft, the 15 West Virginia Republican members of the state senate returned to the Hotel Sinton and announced that so far as they know now, they will remain here indefinitely.

Major Joseph Chilton, brother of one of the Democratic nominees for the United States Senate from West Virginia, it is said, saw members of the party of Republican senators here today, but it is denied that he encouraged their return to Charleston to complete the quorum in the senate.

It is said Major Chilton announced his visit to Cincinnati was in the nature of a social affair and that his only reference to West Virginia political matters was that, in his opinion, the absence of the 15 Republicans would not affect the senatorial election.

Governor Glasscock said so far as he knew, all propositions that had been offered by the Democrats were rejected several days ago and he had not heard of any new one.

DELAYS PROVE

ever, necessarily will be upset in many cases.

Mr. Underwood is noncommital as to the probable makeup of committees, but says no names have been decided upon. There are conferences constantly among the Democrats of the House and gossip resulting therefrom has allotted several of the chairmanships in this way:

Supposed Chairmanships.

Rules, Henry of Texas; judiciary, Clayton of Alabama; interstate commerce, Adamson of Georgia; military, Hay of Virginia; postoffice, Lloyd of Missouri; agriculture, Levi of New York; naval, Padgett of Tennessee; public buildings and grounds, Sheppard of Texas; Indian affairs, Stephens of Texas; appropriations, Fitzgerald of New York; and public lands, Robinson of Arkansas.

Besides these, Ollie James of Kentucky, one of the staunchest lieutenants of Speaker-elect Champ Clark and of Chairman Underwood of the ways and means committee, is now a member of the banking and currency committee and would like to be chairman. Mr. Flood of Virginia would like to head the foreign affairs committee, and Mr. Pou of North Carolina would like to head the District of Columbia committee.

Mr. Fitzgerald, whose principal opponent in the fight for the appropriation committee is Mr. Burleson of Texas, is one of the 18 Democrats who voted against the party in the rules fight in the extra session of the present Congress, but his defection is said to have been forgiven.

Important Bills Up Soon.

The Republicans, under the spur of the leaders and nonquorum insistence of Mr. Dwight of New York, the Republican whip, who proposes to force the attendance of members, are continuing the high speed pressure on appropriation bills. The postoffice appropriation bill, which will be passed early this week, will give way to the agricultural appropriation bill. The District of Columbia, fortifications, naval and diplomatic, and consular appropriation bills, are all ready to be taken up, with the military academy and sundry civil supply bills to follow.

The problem of a congressional reapportionment in the light of the recent census figures will be placed squarely before the House if Chairman Crumpacker of the census committee has his way. He purposes asking the House to take up his bill, the effect of which would be to fix the House membership at a little more than 430 members, as a privileged measure, at the first opportunity.

The ways and means committee will bring in a bill this week to provide for a continuance of the work of the tariff board, giving that body a permanent status. The Republican members finally agreed on the bill which they will pass to the minority of the committee for inspection Tuesday, and then report the measure to the House.

The Bates bill for signal honors to Capt. Robert E. Peary for his polar achievements will be brought up in the House probably this week. Another subject that probably will engage attention this week is the controversy between San Francisco and New Orleans as to which will be designated as the Panama exposition city.

Why a Good Jewelry Store Is the Best Jewelry Store

In nothing as much as jewelry is it as essential for the buyer to seek the best. A good piece of jewelry stands for itself and shows it quality to the most casual observer, and in addition does not need the constant attention that a cheap selling or insecure piece of work demands.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

JUST 30 YEARS AGO TO-DAY

January 22, 1881.

A false alarm of fire gave the department a run down to the Denver & Rio Grande freight depot.

Representative C. W. Barker and Senator C. E. Stubbs were down from Denver spending Sunday at their homes in this city.

A dispatch to The Gazette announced the receipt in Vera Cruz of the first consignment of rails for the Mexican Central railroad, of which General Palmer was one of the officers.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

January 23, 1891.

President Manvel of the Santa Fe railroad arrived in the city with other officials of that road for the purpose of examining the Colorado Midland railroad.

A fine young deer was shot in Williams canon at Manitou.

A. N. Phelps took a lease on the old Grand View hotel building at Cascade and Vermijo avenues and started to thoroughly renovate it preparatory to reopening is as the St. James.

What was said to be the largest train of machinery ever sent over the Rocky mountains left the city over the Midland. According to the veracious reporter, it consisted of 125 cars pulled by four engines, and was consigned to the Co-operative Wagon and Machine company of Salt Lake City.

Seven Historical Mysteries

JOAN OF ARC

What became of Joan of Arc? Was she really burned at the stake at Rouen, as history tells us, or through some subterfuge was she mysteriously saved? In spite of the fact that many historians have painted her last moments in a graphically descriptive way; have repeated as her last words, "Oh, Rouen! Rouen, must thou be my last abode!" as she was led through the thronged streets, was it really Joan of Arc? Artists have painted pictures of her kneeling at the stake with the crucifix pressed to her bosom, the flames mounting all about her. And finally, it is told, that her ashes were collected and thrown into the river.

Could there have been any mistake, and that Joan survived for a number of years after the date named of her execution, May 1, 1431? There are ancient records that would go to prove that Joan was not the martyr she has been pictured in history, or painted on canvas. In August, 1439, more than eight years after the date of execution, there appeared in Orleans a woman who claimed to be Joan of Arc. This may not seem unusual in view of the many impostors who no doubt flourished at that period.

But there is testimony to prove that in the city of Metz, Jehan and Pierre de Lys, Joan's own brothers met the "Claimant," in 1436 and recognized her as their supposedly dead sister. In Orleans, also, where her stirring exploits were well remembered, she was recognized by many of the people who knew her during the thrilling siege as the missing Maid of Orleans. The anfinal memorial service for the repose of the martyr maid's soul, which had been held for eight years, was ordered discontinued.

In the archives of Orleans, it is shown that during the month of July, 1439, 210 livres had been presented to Joan during that period "for the good she did to the said town during the siege of 1429." Orleans, it would thus appear, feasted and honored Joan of Arc eight years after she was supposed to have been burned to death. If the new "Maid" was an impostor, it is odd that no one in all the throngs there (including her two brothers), discovered the fraud.

A letter written to the Duke of Orleans in 1443, by Joan's elder brother, is extant and speaks of Joan as though she were still living. Court records bear the testimony of a parish priest to the effect that as late as 1452, while a member of the original Joan's family, the woman was received as their own dear relative.

The famous French antiquarian Save made a thorough study of the case, ransacking all possible documents, and came to the conclusion that not Joan, but another woman substituted in her place, was burned at Orleans in 1431. The soldiery kept the populace at too great a distance for the deception to be noted. Historians have often wondered why the French king and the French people, who owed so much to her, apparently made no effort to rescue the girl, if the real Joan was to be thus executed.

An old manuscript on the topic, now preserved in the British museum, contains the sentence: "They burned her, or another woman like her; on which point many persons are of different opinions." Even as well-known a writer as Andrew Lang has pronounced the case "the most surprising and baffling of historical mysteries."

Might Be Dead Today

Garden City, Kan.—In a letter from Mrs. James Hamner, of this city, she says, "I firmly believe that I would not be alive today, if it were not for Cardui. I had been a sufferer from womanly troubles all my life, until I found that great remedy. I feel that I can't praise it too highly." Are you a woman, suffering from some of the troubles, to which a woman is peculiarly liable? If so, why not try Cardui, the woman's tonic? You can rely on Cardui. It is purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and acts gently but surely, without bad after-effects. 'Twill help you. Ask your druggist.

OTTUMWA WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ottumwa, Iowa.—"For years I was almost a constant sufferer from female trouble in all its dreadful forms; shooting pains all over my body, sick headache, spinal weakness, dizziness, depression, and everything that was horrid. I tried many doctors in different parts of the United States, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than all the doctors. I feel it my duty to tell you these facts. My heart is full of gratitude to you for my cure."—Mrs. HARRIET E. WAMPLER, 531 S. Ransom Street, Ottumwa, Iowa.

Consider This Advice.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous medicine, made only from roots and herbs, has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, confidential, and always helpful.

LARGE CONVENTIONS WILL HELP SPRINGS

26 Meetings in West This Year and Many Delegates Will Stop Off Here.

Beginning with next month, 26 conventions, either national or international in character, will be held in the west, before the end of this year. While Colorado Springs will not be officially represented at all of these, the majority of them will be of some benefit to this city, inasmuch as many delegates will stop off here, either on their way to, or returning from the meetings.

Of the 26 meetings thus far scheduled, 13 will be held in Denver. Delegates to all of these, it is understood, will arrange to spend at least one day of their time in the west in the Pikes Peak region.

Following are the conventions to be held, together with the meeting-places, and the dates of meeting, where they have been decided upon

Court Decides in Favor of Mr. and Mrs. E. Hungerford

In the district court Saturday evening Judge Sheafor decided the Frank Cotten-Elmer and Amelia Hungerford case in favor of the defendants, ruling that an alleged partnership between the three Hungerford brothers did not exist and that an accounting, as asked for, was not necessary.

Attorneys representing Cotten, conservator of the estate of George Hungerford, claimed that Elmer Hungerford, one of the brothers, wrongfully obtained possession of $1,000 insurance on the life of the late Oscar Hungerford, a second brother, which was made out in favor of George Hungerford, the third brother. It was alleged that Elmer collected the money on the strength of a power of attorney given by George at a time when he was insane. Another claim was for $1,000 insurance on the life of George, with Oscar as beneficiary, and which was alleged to have been wrongfully transferred to Elmer One other object of the suit was to show that a partnership existed among the three brothers, involving property amounting to about $25,000.

The plaintiff was unable to show that there was a conspiracy between Elmer Hungerford and his wife, Amelia, who now control the property of the other two brothers, to defraud Cotten was appointed conservator of the Oscar Hungerford estate by the county court a year or two ago and subsequently bought suit for an accounting.

The case was one of the most involved, perhaps, that has been tried recently in the local courts The decision of Judge Sheafor that a partnership did not exist and that an accounting was not necessary will probably end the controversy. The status of the case leaves the defendants in sole possession of the estate, as George, the third brother, has been committed to an asylum at Pueblo.

Woman's Nature

It is the nature of woman to suffer uncomplainingly, the discomforts and fears that attend the bearing of children—motherhood is their crowning glory, and they brave its sufferings for the joy that children bring. No expectant mother need suffer, however, during the period of waiting, nor feel that she is in danger when baby comes, if Mother's Friend is used in preparation of the event. Mother's Friend relieves the pain and discomfort caused by the strain on the different ligaments, overcomes nausea by counteraction, prevents backache and numbness of limbs and soothes the inflammation of breast glands Its regular use fits and prepares every portion of the mother's system for a proper and natural ending of the term, and it insures for her a quick and complete recovery. Mother's Friend is sold at drug stores. Write for free book for expectant mothers.

Sullivan Says His Fight With Kilrain Was Hardest Battle

By JOHN L. SULLIVAN.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—I suppose every fighter in his ring career has had one fight which he remembers above all the others. This is especially true of pugilists who have held titles in their respective classes. In my time I fought some of the best fighters known to pugilism and the more I fought the better off I was, because I detested training, and I never was in shape to put up a good fight after a long layoff.

You will remember when I did most of my fighting the London prize ring rules governed all contests, and it was a lot different fighting with bare knuckles from wearing gloves and bandages. In my early days they did not offer the purses they are handing out nowadays, and we were satisfied to battle for almost anything. We depended upon side bets for most of our earnings. There is little betting by the fighters. Occasionally we hear of the forfeit money being bet, but such cases are rarities.

In my time there was no limit to most of our fights, and we fought until one of us was unable to go any further or until one was knocked out, but of all my fights I never will forget my battle with Jake Kilrain at Richburg, Miss., on July 8, 1889. We fought seventy-five rounds and I finally won. Each of us bet $10,000 on our chances, and of course we fought with all the physical power we possessed to pull down that money.

It was a hard, grueling fight, one filled with spectacular work, and, no matter how hard I hit Jake I could not put him out, and I know I hit him as hard as I ever hit a man who took the count. You will remember this fight took place just after my return from a successful tour of Australia, and we had a lot of trouble in securing a site for the battle. I believe I trained harder for this fight than any I ever had, for I knew Kilrain was a tough fellow, and I also knew he would give me a hard battle, for I was aware of the fact he could stand a lot of punishment, but I also knew he could not hit hard enough to knock me out.

When they called time I waded into him with absolute fearlessness, and from the start I am sure I was the aggressor. Every time I had him in a bad way he would slip to the ground and save himself from the knockout. Several times I thought I landed effectively, but Jake always would get up and come back for more. We battled along in this sort of manner for forty-three rounds, and then I began to feel sick to my stomach. In the forty-fourth session I remember my friends remarking that my stomach would give out before I could finish Kilrain.

"You're sick, John; let's call it a draw," Jake suggested, and right there he lost whatever chance he had of beating me. Instead of wading into me and taking advantage of my weakened condition he simply stood back with his hands on his hips and allowed me to recuperate some. His remark made me mad and I hit him a stinging blow with my right and knocked him flat on his back.

Transportation Problem Is Big Item With Denver Team

DENVER, Jan. 22.—Just a little matter of transportation has set President McGill of the Denver baseball team to thinking. In quite an accidental manner yesterday he discovered that the Denver team donated $4,275 to the other seven clubs in the Western league last season toward their transportation expenses. This was a little better than an average of $600 for each visiting team. McGill had never figured it up before and was surprised at the result of his figures. It also occurred to him that he had been doing this for several seasons.

Owing to the fact that Denver is a little to one end of the league circuit and requires a little extra traveling a concession was agreed to, a long time ago, in the division of the gate receipts. The visiting team here gets a little the best of the division, notwithstanding the fact that Denver is the best town in the circuit and that the receipts are much larger here than in any of the other cities. When the Denver team goes east it gets no concession, however. In all other towns there is an equal division of the receipts for general admission. Here the visiting team received two and a half cents extra for each admission.

McGill is not kicking over this arrangement, but was merely surprised to know that it amounted to so much each season. The extra money provides several thousand miles of travel for the other teams free of cost.

But there is one point in this connection that McGill is considering. He is going to make out a new schedule to offer as a suggestion to the schedule committee, of which he is a member, and which convenes in St. Joseph next month. The plan of the president of the Denver team is to arrange the movement of the teams so there will be a general lessening of traveling expenses. He believes in making the shortest jumps possible and have the teams move in a continuous manner rather than jumping about unnecessarily. He would have all the teams come to Denver from Lincoln and on the return east make Lincoln the first stop if possible.

McGill also has an idea that it would be better to rearrange the visits so that the team would not be away from home so long as in the past. Two or three weeks' absence would be the limit he would suggest.

"When a team is away from home a month the folks at home almost forget there is a local team," he said yesterday. "A month is too long. Then again, a long absence is disastrous for a team if it has a slump while away."

While it is true that more trips, or, rather, a shorter time away from home, would interfere with his transportation scheme, yet the matter of cost of traveling is not to be considered in keeping alive the acute interest in baseball that the box office requires.

NATIONAL TOURNAMENT ON AMONG CHESS MEN

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Play in the national chess tournament, in which are entered the best metropolitan experts and representatives of Boston and Chicago, in addition to F. J. Marshall, United States champion, and J. R. Capablanca, Cuban champion, began in New York today.

Capablanca, who will arrive from Cuba in time to start in the second round tomorrow, was the only absentee, and was given his bye in the opening round.

The winners of the opening round were F. J. Marshall, H. T. Black, champion of the Brooklyn Chess club; Charles Jaffe, Paul Johnner and Oscar Chajes of Chicago, the Illinois champion. Only one drawn game was recorded, and this was credited to A. F. Kreymborg of this city, against Albert B. Hodges, the Staten Island player. The players were paired as follows:

Morris vs. Johner, Jaffee vs. Baird, Black vs. Smith, Marshall vs. Walcott, Hodges vs. Kreymborg, Chajes vs. Tenenwuisot, Capablanca absent, a bye.

Chief interest centered around Marshall and Walcott, the New England champion. The contest was unexpectedly short, lasting only 34 moves, when it was scored to Marshall's credit as a result of Walcott's overstepping the time limit.

COURSING CLASSIC IS TO BE STARTED TODAY

ROGERS SPRINGS, Tenn., Jan. 22—The field trial classic of the season, the national championship, will begin tomorrow under the direction of the United States club, with at least 16 starters and a total of 25 dogs entered.

The event will conclude the United States trials, and, with the exception of the all-age stake, which is to immediately follow, will terminate the season's trial.

Each of the dogs competing in the classic will be required to run three-hour heats. It will take four days to complete the events.

Sioux Players Ask for Raise

SIUOX CITY, Ia., Jan. 22.—The first contract of the 1911 Packers was received by President Tom Fairweather. Walter Millere, a pitcher secured from the Ohio State league, was the first player to affix his "John Henry" to a contract.

Prospects are good for holdouts, according to letters received from several players on the club roll. A majority to whom were sent contracts calling for their former salary, have asked a raise. As these men received top money for the Western league last season it is not probable they will get an increase in pay. Both Towne and Fairweather believe the salaries offered by them will compare favorably with the pay roll of a majority of the other clubs in the league, and in some cases are larger. Ball players on pennant winning clubs always seek a raise for the following season.

FAST FEATHERWEIGHTS IN 10-ROUND BOUT TONIGHT

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Jan. 22.—The 10-round battle between Abe Attell, featherweight champion of the world, and Billy Allen, featherweight champion of Canada, to be held here tomorrow night, is arousing considerable interest.

A special train from Ottawa will carry 200 Canadian sportsmen to the scene of the battle.

AT JUAREZ

JUAREZ, Mex., Jan. 22.—Harrigan, carrying 122 pounds, created a new track record for a mile when he won the El Paso handicap in 1:37 3-5, at Terraxes park, today. The time is 1-5 second faster than Knight Dale ran last year. Helmet cut out the pace to the stretch when Harrigan took the lead and won in a drive by half a length from the favorite Polla.

A NOVEL NEWSPAPER

From the Pittsburg Dispatch.

The latest addition to the daily papers of the metropolis is the New York News Letter, edited by Ernest F. Birmingham, secretary of The Fourth Estate, a weekly publication devoted to newspapers. The News Letter is an afternoon paper, presenting in concise form a summary of the worthwhile news and editorials of the morning press, and aims to furnish a digest of public opinion daily.

BASEBALL PLAYERS MAKE EASY MONEY

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Baseball is getting such a firm grip on the American public that the fans, not content with watching the games during the regular season, are anxious to show their appreciation of the national pastime in the winter months by patronizing vaudeville shows that feature diamond favorites," says Mike Donlin.

"The stars of the diamond are coming to be stars of the stage. The demand for ball players capable of doing a turn in vaudeville is much greater than the supply.

"The time is coming fast when any ball player who can make himself popular during the summer months will be sure to get a job on the stage during the winter."

The announcement that "King" Cole of the Chicago Cubs, would take up the stage as his winter employment brings this all the more forcibly to mind. The words of Donlin recall the fact that a few years ago the number of actor-ball players was limited.

Chicago has always been the hotbed of the vaudeville ball player. In addition to Callahan, Joe Tinker, John Evers, Doc White and Ed Walsh have received engagements in the Lake city.

Tinker and Callahan have been out before and the latter can do a monologue as well as most comedians.

Mike Donlin has been in the business for two years. In New York Christy Mathewson and his battery partner, "Chief" Meyers have been doing a turn that is meeting with more than ordinary success.

In a Cincinnati playhouse recently, Larry McLean, catcher for the Reds, and Charlie Doolin, manager of the Philadelphia team, divided honors. The Quaker backstop has a fine voice.

Bashfulness is all that prevented Ed Konetchy from becoming an actor. The big Cardinal first baseman was offered a contract by Manager Leo Reichenbach, of the Standard theater, but the big fellow thinks that it would be much harder to face an audience of a couple of thousand in a closed building than it would be out on the diamond.

Ed Walsh, Doc White and Johnny Evers have amused the Chicago public, but have never cured to wander from their own fireside.

Harry Howell the former pitcher and scout of the Browns, has also turned to the footlights. For several years Harry has been taking vocal lessons and it was his ambition to turn to grand opera, if possible, when his baseball days were finished. Recently he was singing ballads in a nickelodeon in St. Louis. He was repeatedly called upon for encores, while nightly capacity audiences prove that Howell is still a popular individual.

FAIR SCORES MARK START OF TOURNEY

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 22.—With a score of 2,718, the Duffeys of St. Louis, holders of the middlewestern championship, featured the bowling in the second day of the eleventh annual tournament of the American Bowling congress here tonight.

The performance of George Waley stood out prominently. He finished the first game with a score of 245, making six successive strikes, and rolled the three games with a high total of 594.

The Capital quintet landed high score with 2,695, while the Witter-Monroes were third with 2,670. The teams that competed in the five-men event tonight are from St. Louis.

Competing for the first time in a national tournament, Harry Stoltz of St. Louis led the individual bowlers with a score of 607 in the afternoon series. Stoltz's score establishes a high score record for the first day of a tournament competition.

In the afternoon, two squads of 16 bowlers faced the pins and 16 teams also competed in the two-men event. Stoltz and his brother, Louis, finished with high high score in the two-men event, securing a count of 1,091. Eubanks and Mason of East St. Louis pressed them closely, however, finishing with 1,081.

WILCOX LOWERS TIME AT LOS ANGELES MEET

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—Howard Wilcox, driving a National, broke the American five-mile competition speedway record at the motordrome today. His time was 3 minutes 21 seconds.

De Palma won the 10-mile free-for-all in 6.54, and Wilcox the five-mile free-for-all in 3:42 4-5. Wilcox also won the 50-mile Class C race in 40.23 4-5.

Fearing and Scott Win Tennis Honors

BOSTON, Jan. 22.—George R. Fearing, Jr., and J. H. Scott of the Tennis and Racquet club of this city, won the national racquet doubles championship for 1911 by defeating Payne Whitney and M. Barger of the New York Racquet and Tennis club, four straight games in the final match of the tournament. The scores were 15-5, 15-5, 15-8, 15-5.

It is the fourth time that Fearing and Scott, playing as partners, have won the title within seven years.

The principle of the spring tape measure has been utilized by a Massachusetts inventor of a coiled wire attachment for electric lights to permit them to be carried about a room.

CO-OPERATION

tance for us to know that the Antlers hotel interests are behind the present movement. I believe the truth or falsity of this fact to be irrelevant.

Second—The question is to what motives are prompting the men who are allied on one side or the other does not affect the issue. The question it seems to me, can be decided on its merits, without consideration of the motives of those lined upon either side.

Third—What certain individuals may think that everyone should do or should not do does not affect the issue. It is a condition and not a theory that faces us now.

Matter a Social One.

As Dr. Franklin said last Sunday, the question is a social one. He also states, and in this I heartily agree with him, that the matter must be approached from the standpoint of religion—the religious conviction of the community as that has been developed.

The highest call of man is doubtless the negation of self for the benefit of others, and I am willing to accept this standard in approaching this subject.

I have tried to eliminate certain matters that seemed irrelevant. There are also certain arguments which, though possibly relevant to the discussion, do not appeal to me.

First—It has been said that prohibition is damaging to the town from a financial standpoint. If a moral issue is involved this argument can well be eliminated because it is necessary for a community as well as an individual to sacrifice possible financial gain for moral conviction. None of us would sell our moral convictions for a price.

Second—We must eliminate the utopian idea of the benefit to the world in case everyone should voluntarily resolve to give up the use of liquor. For the purpose of our discussion, it may be admitted that the total amount of evil done by the use of liquor in the world outweighs the total possible good. The immediate possibility of the absolute elimination of the use of liquor in the world is not before us.

Third—The argument that great things have been done under the influence of liquor does not appeal to me. I do not believe that the works of art and literature that have been (falsely, I think) attributed to the influence of liquor, are solely attributable to that influence. Something else higher and better was there. But if not, those particular works might be eliminated without material detriment to mankind.

Fourth—For this purpose of discussion, I am also willing to eliminate the argument that the individual must have a certain amount of liquor in order to live. There are doubtless many necessary medicinal uses, but the social use of liquor is not necessary to sustain life.

Two Main Questions.

How, then, shall we approach the discussion? The issue as defined appears to me to present two main questions.

(a) What is the evil in the liquor traffic? And,

(b) What is the best way to reach that evil?

Answering the first question: It does not seem to me that we can consider the opinion of this, that or the other individual with reference to what the evil is. We must take the conviction of our community on the subject if we are going to treat the regulation of the evil practically. What, then, is the popular conviction? Is the use of liquor an evil per se, or is it the abuse that we would eliminate? It is my firm belief that the majority of the people do not believe that the mere use of liquor is an evil of itself. When I say the "majority," I mean the majority as applied to the people of the world, to the people of our country, to the people of our state and to the people of our community. There are doubtless a great number of individuals who believe this, but there is so substantial a class that does not believe it that this class, even if it may not even be the majority, must be considered and reckoned with, if we would try to reach any practical solution of the question. On the other hand, I think we will all agree that any fair-minded man deplores the abuse of liquor. Many men may be thoughtless and not realize the full extent of their obligations to their families and to the community, and will sometimes commit acts in this connection that we would condemn, and that even they would doubtless regret, but I do not believe it can be said that there is any substantial class of people that does not heartily condemn the abuse in the use of liquor and is unwilling to co-operate in any practical method of eliminating that abuse. We cannot unequivocably say with our present information and with the present habits and customs of our people, that the motives of those who use liquor are all wrong. I shall later explain just what I mean by the word "motives." I want merely, at this point, to emphasize the use of the word. The saloonkeeper persuades himself, at least that his main purpose is not to bring misery. I can even conceive of his feeling that he may be doing a certain good in offering convenience for the relaxation that comes to those who frequent his establishment and to meet their friends there in a social way and have a friendly drink together. The apparent good fellowship for the time outweighs and overshadows the more serious consequences of the abuse. In our clubs today, the good fellowship is without question sincere. The giving of a drink is regarded by a truly large class of people as a symbol of hospitality and friendship. If a man serves wine at his house at a private dinner, his motive in most cases is the same as in serving the dinner—one of friendship and hospitality. It would be absurd to say that he contemplates bringing misery to his guests. Whether all agree with these sentiments as I am expressing them, or not, I still believe that the majority of people hold these views and in the class of instances with h I have mentioned the motive prompting the serving of wines is good. If these views are wrong and if there have grown up among us customs and habits which are deteriorating our people, any change that must come must be a gradual evolutionary process and I do not believe that the step can be taken all at once by means of a command.

The Recognized Evil.

My conclusion on this particular point; then is that so far as the subject has progressed in our popular thought and conviction that is at the present stage of our evolution towards the ideal solution, whatever that may be, the abuse in the use of liquor and not the mere use of it, is the recognized evil of today.

Dr. Franklin has said that the matter must be approached from the religious standpoint. Let me define what I understand by the religious standpoint. I believe that our world is growing better. What I mean by better is that we are approaching all the time the standards of Christian philosophy which can be summed up in what we understand as the Golden Rule: the doing to others as we would be done by. As one writer puts it, however, our moral development is three-fold.

First, the laws which we make, which may be defined as covering the lowest plane in our moral development, require certain standards. They look at the results of acts and prohibit wrongful acts so far as possible by punishing in those cases where the particular wrongful act may lead to certain results to third parties. It is difficult, nay, impossible, to prohibit the wrongful act itself except by placing around the individuals in the community a certain fear of the results. The law, then, so far as intention or inward motive goes can only regard such intention as manifested, and from its nature, can reach no farther.

Second—Our Christian philosophy, in its teaching, adds a next higher step. The voluntary consideration for and love of others. This attitude leads to the examination of the motive, the heart of man. No law can cover this. It is the outgrowth of a higher conception—a change or regeneration. I believe all our ministers will agree with me in this.

Third—Christian philosophy further adds the last step, namely character developed by service for the attainment of the Christian ideal of human brotherhood. This is best illustrated by the lives of our good ministers, who have sacrificed financial gain to themselves to serve others. We cannot show too great respect or admiration for them.

Laws Cannot Develop Character.

The laws can go no further than to set certain standards and punish the violation of certain rules. They can never reach motives or develop character. It is impossible to legislate inward morality. Right motives and developed character are something inside the individual not reached or taught by mere law or coercion. It is true that, as our motives are made better and as our characters become more developed, we can make our laws cover a larger area and make the general plane covered by the law a higher one, but this is because a unified public sentiment has spread itself sufficiently to give it the force to carry out such laws, which, after all, must still remain the lowest moral development of our society. The planes representing voluntary consideration for others and character developed by service must ever be higher. The standards of the law must always be lower than the requirements of right motive and character. Whatever law we may have, therefore, cannot possibly rise with hope of enforcement to the higher plane reached by the inward morality of the few, or perhaps even of the majority, because any large element in the country or community, feeling a law to be beyond its conviction will be indifferent to its enforcement, if not actively hostile. To bring our community as a whole to the higher planes, we must educate it by interest, love, logic and persuasion. We cannot coerce it.

Owing to the present popular conviction with reference to prohibition, I do not believe that we can coerce our community into it. For the present, therefore, we must confine ourselves to handling as delicately as we can the abuse in the liquor traffic, and not waste our energy in an effort to eliminate by law the use of liquor entirely.

What, then, are the remedies?

The remedies that have been proposed to properly regulate the liquor traffic are, first, prohibiting the sale of liquor, and, second, regulating the sale under a license system. I will endeavor to discuss these two methods in this order.

Abuse Only That Is Deplored.

It is my belief that prohibition is not the practical method of handling this question, because it does not prohibit, and the reason that it does not prohibit is that the principle of prohibition is not in accord with the popular conviction. As I have said above, the majority of people, or a large element in the population, at least, do not consider the use of liquor an evil per se. If it is the abuse only that they deplore, they cannot be asked to support a prohibition movement unless they are also asked to give up drinking themselves absolutely, which would involve their taking the stand for absolute teetotalism. This is asking them to go further than their present conviction. We may eventually be able to educate our people up to this point, if we are convinced of the right of it, but I do not believe we can coerce them to it. Human nature succumbs to love and reason where law fails. To illustrate: I have had, and I do not doubt that nearly everyone has had, very dear friends who, at one time or another, have been more or less the slaves of the drink habit. Some of the finest natures, the most lovable and sincere, are often caught. Such persons could never be reached by coercion. Affection and interest and reason have reached and helped many. This is simply human nature. And consider for a moment the importance of this. If the wrongs of the world could be eliminated by law merely, the apparent Divine purpose of developing us in the attributes of charity, love and brotherhood would seem unnecessary. I am not prepared to say that a man who drinks is an irretrievable sinner, nor am I prepared yet to command any friend of mine to stop drinking. To quote scripture, if that is allowable, St. Paul says, "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no meat." But he does not say "I will forbid my brother to eat meat." The principle involved in this seems to me to be that, under any circumstances where we may harm an individual by some action that we take, and it makes no difference whether it is taking a drink of wine or something else, we have a greater responsibility for that action of ours than if no evil consequences are attendant upon our act but we accomplish nothing if we take no thought of our own action but merely try to avoid it in the form of command to the individual "You shall" or "you shall not" do something. A man cannot say, "I am strong, so I can drink, but I forbid you to drink because you may get drunk." For an older man to urge a younger man to drink or to do any other thing that may hurt his character or his life is despicable, but this is not necessarily the same case as taking a hospitable glass of wine with a friend whose moral standards we are aware of. Even if, however, we are ready to go to the extreme of taking no wine ourselves because of the possibly remote influence on others, still I cannot see the justification in prohibiting others until we have persuaded them that our viewpoint is right, and they have voluntarily come to our conclusions. A preliminary step to supporting prohibition therefore, is always that each individual shall first decide what he will or will not do before he join in a propaganda to prohibit others. If the above reasoning is sound it is obvious that no man can vote for prohibition and at the same time drink anything himself under any circumstances, because he is prohibiting others from doing what he does not prohibit himself. Hypocrisy is, in my judgment, more to be despised, and has a far worse effect on the community, than the actual commission of the wrong.

Statistics Mean Little

Statistics have been offered to show that there are less drunkards under the prohibition system than under the license system. These statistics mean little or nothing to me. In the first place statistics can be ringed and are ranged, on both sides of the question. The so-called liquor interests have as many statistics as the prohibitionists. So that if we begin to look too hard for the statistics, we run in danger of losing sight of the principle involved in the debate. In the next place statistics cannot show all the facts because there is no way to get at all the facts. I think it is fair to say that a great majority of the people who drink, never get drunk. The private glass of wine is not advertised and need not be and yet the private glass of wine may violate the law in a prohibition town as much as the drunkard. Furthermore, statistics can never show whether or not we are reaching at the vitals of our people, whether we are making progress in the essential, whether we are teaching human sympathy and developing character in its highest sense, that is, service for one's fellow-man. And, after all that is what we want—a higher individual realization of rightness. We are not in a position to compare sins which are personal and individual. Hatred, envy, selfishness and the like cannot be legislated against, and yet if we could eliminate these and similar wrongs, we would soon dispose of the liquor question. When we can reach the heart and inculcate the highest principles of human brotherhood, the laws can be forgotten.

A fight such as is threatened in the question that is before this community, may lead to outward success for one side or the other, but, in my judgment, where a grave matter of opinion such as this is involved, the fight is unjustified, however noble may be the motives of the fighters. Sometimes in treating grave public questions, destructive methods are necessary, but the people must first see the light and rightness of a certain course before they are forced to it.

Construction Measures Appeal.

Constructive methods appeal to me more strongly, because a building up of right principles overshadows the wrong, and, ipso facto, destroys it. What I mean by conservative methods is methods which are constructive of the principles of moral education that, have been outlined above. The personal conviction of the individual that there are higher demands upon him than the mere obeying of the letter of the law. What we want is more of the spirit of the law, less of the empty nothingness of the letter, more charity and love, less command. It is fair for me to take this position because I am a lawyer, and as such I know the unfortunate tendency of my profession to quibble over the letter of the law where, in many cases, we know its spirit and intent.

At this time we should not put our citizens in the dilemma either of taking a higher stand than their conviction demands of them, or else of making them of necessity have an inward desire to evade the law. Let us find what our conviction is, adopt a method consistent with it, and enforce the method, no matter what the cost may be.

Having outlined what appear to be some of the chief objections to the prohibition method, I have come to the alternative of prohibition, which is suggested to be regulation under a license system. Those who have followed the arguments set forth above may well ask at this point, "Admitting that reasoning as sound, why should any steps be taken? Why is even regulation justified? Why have any laws? Why not live, every individual according to his own desires?" The answer is that we can find the plane where conviction coincides with what laws we are compelled to make.

Cannot Ignore Point.

I will reiterate what I have said before, that practically the unanimity of our people deplore the abuse of the liquor traffic. There is so negligible a difference of opinion on this point that we can properly ignore it. A man must be all bad or mentally deranged who does not deplore the misery attendant on intemperance. Some members of society are so base that we cannot leave them to their own desires. These we must restrain, if possible; but, in any event, we must punish them for the consequences of their wrongful acts. But such wrongful acts society recognizes as evils per se. In this particular matter, it is the abuse in the use of liquor that society sees to be an evil per se. If the use of liquor were not abused, we would hear nothing of this prohibition movement. What we must do, then, is to eliminate the abuse so far as possible. If, as we develop in our moral character, our study of the question leads us eventually as a people to the extreme stand of absolute prohibition, if that idea is not eventually beyond our conviction, we can and must at such time as we develop to that point, make prohibition the law. But I submit that that time is not here yet. We must therefore cooperate to find some measure of relief that is consistent with our conviction as it present developed, and when we have found that relief we must individually, and as a people, enforce it no matter what it may cost us. If, in its enforcement and practical application we learn of its weaknesses we can doubtless improve as time goes on. If such an ordinance as we may pass requires too much of us, we may have to weaken it in some particulars and I do not agree that the weakening of the rigor of a law is a backward step. It may be the most emancipated forward step that we can take. If such an ordinance requires too little of us, and if we find we are not reaching the real abuses, we shall doubtless have to strengthen it; but so long as we have any law or ordinance on our books, both as a people and individuals, we must enforce it without compromise and without permitting its interpretation according to personal dictates of the individual. In this sense, we are a nation of laws and not of men. No personal judgment of any individual, no idea of expediency, justifies the nonenforcement of any law and, in enforcing it, it is just as important in my opinion that its spirit shall be adhered to by our individual inclinations, as that the machinery of our government shall be brought into play to make it effective. If this prohibition movement succeeds it is our duty as individuals to see to its enforcement. So long as the spirit of the law will not be lived up to by a sufficient number of people to make their voice heard, the law is useless as an ultimate power for good, no matter what the statistics may say. I would rather see a lax law strictly adhered to in letter and spirit than a rigorous law only moderately enforced, even though statistics may show less drunkenness in the latter case. Quantity of letter obedience or results is less desirable than quality of spirit obedience.

In forming any ordinance, therefore, it seems to me that we must consider these principles, and aim to accomplish these ends.

Present Fight Unjustified.

I am satisfied, in my own mind, that the fight on this question is deplorable and unjustified. A co-operation by the honest-thinking men on both sides (and in spite of what has been said or what may be said, there are honest-thinking men on both sides), would lead to the framing of an ordinance that would represent the conviction of the people, and which could be made, I believe, to cover the present needs of the situation.

There is no question involved of a backward step in giving up the prohibition idea. For Dr. Franklin and others to say that they would be losing ground to co-operate with us in this matter, does not seem to me to be fair or reasonable. By such a statement it seems to me, that they at once take an antagonistic attitude and assume to themselves the ability to define what the morals of the people should be without considering the people in the matter. If a number of honest-thinking men had gotten together at the beginning of this movement and had requested the appointment by the Mayor or some official of certain individuals to prepare and submit an ordinance for the consideration of the people, I believe that we could have solved some of our problems by this method.

I deplore the fact that the movement for the change seems to have emanated from a source that appears to be financially interested in the outcome. That, however, does not necessarily make the movement bad, and I still think that a willingness to cooperate by Dr. Franklin and those who share his views would lead to the results desired by all. I am not prepared now to offer any particular form of ordinance, nor to discuss the proper form at this time. As an individual, I would be very glad, however, and I know there are others who feel with me, to co-operate in a careful, mature deliberation of this subject, in order to arrive at the results we are all hoping for.

Enlist Members By Consent.

In the above discussion I have tried to show what the issue is. I have tried to eliminate certain irrelevant matters and certain arguments that have been made on one side or the other. I have tried to present the real questions that seem to me to be involved in the issue and to treat those questions in an honest way. I have tried to discuss the two possible remedies that have been suggested, and to indicate as clearly as I could my reasons for opposing the prohibition principle.

If I could sum up my whole idea in a few words, I should say that the point of the discussion is that we cannot legislate inward morality.

Any movement that affects the private life or habits of the individual must be built upon a foundation of the reason of rightness, and not upon command. Any such movement to succeed, must enlist its members with their consent, and not against it. Any large group of individuals that should be defeated in a movement such as this is, will still hold to its opinion as to the moral right of the question, and will continue to do the thing which is prohibited if there is any way technical or otherwise to evade the law. We cannot approve this attitude, but it is a fact. Let us recognize what the conviction of the people as to their personal liberties is, and the question of personal liberty, and enact a law consistent with this conviction.

THE LAZIEST PEOPLE

From the Times, of Malaya.

There is no doubt that the Malay is one of the laziest people in the world. Except in rare cases they will not take the trouble to learn when they are young, and afterward, if they have learned, they will not exert themselves to apply their knowledge to any object which requires a sustained effort. That they possess energy is known to any one who has seen Malays engaged in any enterprise which savors of sport. They do not mind the trouble if there is only some risk and excitement in the work.

It is estimated that there are more than 1,000 persons in the world who are making a serious study of aviation.

21 NEW MEMBERS ADDED

11 Conversions Were Also Reported From the United Brethren in Christ Church.

L. O. Miller of Dayton, O., denominational treasurer of the church, was the principal speaker last night at a rousing meeting held at the United Brethren in Christ church. The meeting was of more than passing interest, inasmuch as 21 new members were taken in. This large number of accessions was due in part to the evangelistic meetings which are being held at the church. There have been 25 conversions in the last 10 days, 11 of these being made last night. This makes a total of 75 new members to the church since the Rev. Henry Irving Kohler took the pastorate about 13 months ago.

Mr. Miller gave an interesting talk, having for his subject, "A Business Man and Religion," and pointing out the privileges a business man is afforded by a Christian religion.

PROSPECTORS OPPOSE BILL

SAY WATER RIGHTS WILL ENDANGER CLAIMS.

May Hold Protest Meeting. City Water System Official Takes Opposite View.

With the announcement that Mayor Avery had wired Senator Guggenheim not to amend the Colorado Springs land bill, in view of the fact that it would endanger the city's water rights on the slopes of Pikes Peak, a score or more prospectors who have claims on the tract of land in question, are preparing a vigorous protest. They allege that in spite of contrary opinion, there are mineral deposits of considerable value on the Peak, and the city taking over the tract would invalidate the claims. According to William Smith of this city, a number of these prospectors will meet this week to protest against what they claim is "taking their bread and butter from them."

Smith claims that there are several claims on the tract from which ore worth from $25 to $30 a ton has been mined in small quantities, and that those who own these claims are confident that at a greater depth more ore is obtainable. He also alleges that one claim, for which $10,000 is asked, is located in the tract where water rights are desired

The matter in question has been before the public for over a year, and a number of prominent mining engineers and owners have claimed that the mineral deposits were worth nothing. In the early history of the region, the slopes of Pikes Peak were favorites with the prospectors, and the larger part of the ground has been gone over perhaps a dozen times.

Smith said last night that as soon as possible the men would get together to decide on some action to prevent their claims being taken over for the water system of Colorado Springs.

According to Water Superintendent McReynolds, the claims that would be affected are abandoned holes, which never produced anything, and which have been demonstrated as useless. He said: "The city would have to buy these patented claims in the tract of land where a watershed would be established, and wouldd be given the legal right to do so if the bill passes. The section in question has been tunneled and prospected and nothing has been discovered of value."

CASHIER WANTED FOR SHORTAGE IS ARRESTED

SALINA, Kan., Jan. 22.—According to messages received here today by County Attorney Bartlett, M. E. Church, formerly cashier of the Holyrood bank, at Holyrood, Kansas, near here, was arrested in Bakersfield Cal., Saturday. Church is wanted in connection with a shortage of $65,000 in the bank's accounts. It is alleged that Church and a former cashier were responsible for the shortage.

COOLIE'S DEATH CAUSES MUCH SERIOUS RIOTING

HANKOW, China, Jan 22.—The death of a coolie, who was found dying, by the British police, resulted in serious disorders today. The Chinese suspected that the police had killed the coolie, and rioting began in several sections.

British and German gunboats landed detachments, and fierce fighting followed, in which eight Chinese were killed.

The viceroy is sending native troops to restore order.

Hankow is a treaty port in the province of Hu-Peh, on the Yangtse Kiang. It is one of the largest cities of the empire, with a population of 850,000. Many foreign merchants reside there.

The danger of fire is eliminated when an oil tempering bath is heated by electricity instead of coal or gas.

LARGE TONNAGE OF IRON PRODUCTS SOLD

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Activity continued in foundry iron at the expense of prices in the east and south last week, but few sales of stub-making iron were affected. Contracts for 75,000 tons were placed in all sections of which 35,000 were placed in the eastern district.

The largest tonnages went to manufacturers of machine tools at Easton, Pa., makers of electrical equipment in New England, and to pipe works in the east, south and the interior. New inquiries came out for about 25,000 tons, the largest including manufacturers of heating apparatus and of blowers in Massachusetts. In all 25,000 tons are still under negotiation. One feature was the free offering of furnace accumulations of all sorts and kinds of metal, and the taking up of about 30,000 tons by pipe works mainly in the south. The only feature of encouragement for the steel mills was release of many small orders for structural material accompanied by specifications and for quick shipment.

Some large export orders also were secured. Beyond this the situation was unchanged and it is notable that round tonnages involving long deliveries were withheld and there is reason to expect they will continue to be until concessions which consumers demand are made.

Railroads placed orders for 3,700 cars, 82 locomotives and 45 long tons of rails, the latter including 25,000 tons for export. Wire products were advanced on Saturday $1.00 a ton by the American Steel and Wire company. Wire has been relatively lower than steel bars and now is readjusted.

TWO VESSELS COLLIDE OFF ENGLISH COAST

DOVER, Eng., Jan. 22.—The Hamburg-American steamship President Lincoln, which left New York January 12 for Hamburg, and the American liner Tasso put in here today.

They were in collision off Goodwin sands

It is learned that the President Lincoln has not been damaged. She came to Dover assisting the Tasso, which is believed to have some of her plates crushed in, and was taking water rapidly.

Tugs, sent in response to wireless calls for assistance, helped the Tasso into this harbor, escorted by the President Lincoln, the deck of which was ablaze with electric lights as she stood by the injured vessel.

The President Lincoln sustained no damage, but the Tasso, when she came into the harbor here, was badly down by the head.
